Jun 21, Austin Moyle rated it liked it Interesting seeing into the minds of admissions officers more so than the applicants. Basically the kids that have the best shot have the same quirks as everyone else but can reveal their idiosyncrasies eloquently through a story without getting caught up in their own accomplishments. This advice is applied consistently to judge one essay after another. By the end of the book if you have not absorbed or heeded the advice but get accepted to your dream school anyway, I would love to read your essay. Apr 03, Simon rated it it was amazing Borrowed this book for my little sister who is applying to college. A surprisingly good read. To view it, click here. Over the winter break, I read this book about Harvard admissions essays recommended by my Korean college counselor. Out of curiosity for how seniors write their essays for college, I decided to read this collection of essays written by the students from the most prestigious university in the United States. First, I realized that it takes a long time to write an admissions essay. Originally, I had thought it would be similar to my prior experience of writing essays in school; however, the introdu Over the winter break, I read this book about Harvard admissions essays recommended by my Korean college counselor. Since I had already written my personal narrative for my summative English assignment, I thought that I could apply this experience to writing college applications. Therefore, I decided to accumulate precious episodes in my mind from now on for my college essay. Second, I noticed that there is no specific content required. Before reading this book, I assumed that Harvard would give a specific topic that tells me what subject material I have to write. However, the authors focused on different times of their lives including when they were very little or attending high school. Third, I understood how important it was to write with concise. This reiterated what my English and geometry teachers had mentioned about writing with impact. I could see that what they had been emphasizing was something significant to my future life. Hence, I made a resolution to always be precise and inspirational in order to successfully enroll in college. I learned these three important lessons for writing an essay to enter college. In general, I found out that I am currently learning step by step in school how to be victorious in my future. In conclusion, I made a resolution to do my best in school to prepare me for a better future. Most of all, I sincerely thank my Korean college counselor who suggested this book to me as well as my English and Geometry teachers who gave me a brief image of college admissions.

In addition, the hike taught me several valuable lessons that will allow me to increase my understanding through scientific research. Although the first few miles of the hike up Mt. Madison did not offer fantastic views, the vistas became spectacular once I climbed above tree line. Immediately, I sensed that understanding the natural world parallels climbing a mountain. To reach my goal of total comprehension of natural phenomena, I realized that I must begin with knowledge that may be uninteresting by itself. However, this knowledge will form the foundation of an accurate view of the universe. Much like every step while hiking leads the hiker nearer the mountain peak, all knowledge leads the scientist nearer total understanding. Above tree line, the barrenness and silence of the hike taught me that individuals must have their own direction. All hikers know that they must carry complete maps to reach their destinations; they do not allow others to hold their maps for them. At the summit, the view of the surrounding mountain range is spectacular. The panorama offers a view of hills and smaller mountains. Some people during their lives climb many small hills. However, to have the most accurate view of the world, I must be dedicated to climbing the biggest mountains I can find. Too often people simply hike across a flat valley without ascending because they content themselves with the scenery. The mountain showed me that I cannot content myself with the scenery. When night fell upon the summit, I stared at the slowly appearing stars until they completely filled the night sky. Despite the windy conditions and below freezing temperatures, I could not tear myself away from the awe-inspiring beauty of the cosmos. Similarly, despite the frustration and difficulties inherent in scientific study, I cannot retreat from my goal of universal understanding. Obviously, earthly concerns are insignificant to the rest of the universe. However, I experienced the overriding need to understand the origins and causes of these phenomena. The hike also strengthened my resolve to climb the mountain of knowledge while still taking time to gaze at the wondrous scenery. Only then can the beauty of the universe and the study of science be purposefully united. Attaining this union is my lifelong goal.
