Share Small Space Combination Laundry Room Powder Bathroom Refresh Have you got a small space that needs to be stream-lined, organized and hard working, while still being stylish and inviting? I introduced some organizational items and a super new shelf. That led to fresh paint and a few DIY projects as well. I love the after, and I can not wait to share it with you!! I love that these assignments keep me on my toes and knocking those to-do list items off my list! As I started digging in, I realized everything needed fresh paint, before I did anything else. Especially the planked wood wall. The fresh paint made a world of difference and really brightened up the whole room! The main wall is perfect for an accent color, and I just freshened up the already existing grey. I think that should make the most sense. One of the wonderful things about having that massive garage sale we recently held, is that I purged the house, hard, of all the extra things we simply did not need. Like the extra towels. No, we have a folding counter. The big sea grass basket is perfect for towels, and when I have them all folded, they get taken right up to the linen closet upstairs. I also splurged on a new ironing board. On a side note: Depending on how your washer and cabinets are situated, you may be able to do something like this. We built a square base, nailed it into the wall and cabinet, then added the top piece, and nailed it to the base. It was functional, but we knew as soon as we installed it, that it was a little heavy, a little large, and a bit too angular. I love the curvy new version so, so, soooo much! Jim and I designed this using some vintage mouldings we picked up on one of our junking adventures and I gave it a fresh, little-bit-distressed paint job. I know I already said that. I meant it the second time too! Because there are no windows in the room, I felt like it needed a little more pretty and decided to add my laundry soap to a drink dispenser I never actually use. Plus, it goes great with the other glass containers I was already using. The ceiling is a challenge in here. The new mirror has a minimal frame and that means not only can I see in it, but Jim can too! The last one had a big, fat wood frame that I loved, but after a bit, Jimmy let me know he had to crouch down to see in it. This one is taller hubby approved. And it was a steal! As I got into this project, I realized I wanted to make more changes to the space! The vanity did get some new hardware for now. Some little porcelain clock faces. We just replaced the commode with a model I am way to impressed with. I never knew the old one was soâ€ crappy. The new sign is from the company I was telling you all about on Facebook last week. Having the floor freed up is wonderful!!!! And here it is!! The biggest change in the roomâ€ I knew when I first saw this shelf, I wanted it. Then, I realized I actually had a place to put it, where it would be super useful. The clothes hamper is tucked up, off the floor. I hang a lot of clothes to dry and I was always taking up the entire doorway. The shelves are really generously sized. I did get just enough out of the cabinets to make them function better though. Having the laundry basket up off the floor, is one less thing to move when I want to clean them. Remember earlier, I showed a glimpse of the new ironing board? The new one is like an ironing board sports car. It was so pretty. Needless to say, we gutted it to the studs. The finishes we selected were very simple, and they have served us well, but I am very ready to do some upgrading! Thanks, as always for joining me. I so enjoy sharing our home, projects, changes and future plans with you. Thank you so much!

You know that feeling “getting everything ready so that you are all comfy and cozy all winter long. I had to make it happen. This is my mudroom – it is right off my kitchen and it is where my pantry is located. I consider a pantry one of the best features any kitchen can have – large or small. You need a place to be able to see and organize all of your food. A very overstuffed single door coat closet! The house we lived in previously had a walk-in pantry – it was an entire room. I was pantry spoiled! The kitchen in this house had a pantry cabinet – it was small and I could never find anything as it was cramped and deep. I was frustrated until I finally came up with the idea to move the contents of this coat closet out to the garage and extend the closet to make a double door pantry. We made a coat and shoe wall with hooks and shelves out in the garage. With two daughters, that space in the garage fondly became referred to as the shoe room: Big items are easy to move in and out. Makes it easy to organize, restock, create a shopping list by just glancing, and keeping like things together. I like being able to see everything at a glance, but it did take some work. This is what I did. I Made a Plan You can see where the old wall used to be in the photo below. We filled in the space with some scrap flooring pieces we had left over from a previous project. As with most DIY projects -we ran into a few problems. One was the new door I bought for the left side of the expanded closet at Home Depot. Darn, Darn, Darn – so close to getting a real pantry. Then I had a brainstorm and it worked. Since the new door was the same overall size as the existing door and all the other closet doors that came with the house. We took the door from our bedroom closet – that matched and hung it here in the pantry and put the new door on the bedroom closet. We also ran into the problem of how to keep the doors closed since there would no longer be a door jam. The doors stay closed perfectly. I measured the width and height of everything I wanted to store in here. I figured out the space that would be needed between the shelves to accommodate all different heights of items and packages. They sit on 1 x 2 supports that are mounted along the back and side walls. We painted everything white. I covered each shelf with freezer paper with the shiny side up. It is inexpensive and lasts a long time. It can also be wiped clean which is an added benefit. It used to hold a lot more junk food when my daughters were still living at home. Now it looks a little empty. Organized It Group items by size. It is the best way to use the space efficiently. Big items go on the floor. Bulk items from Costco, pet food containers and two baskets that hold cleaning and utility supplies. Sneak peek at how I made this pantry prettier – more on how I did that coming up. They also make it easier to move things when I need to re-organize the shelves when something new comes in. How To Organize Plastic Grocery Bags I re-use plastic bags and store them in cardboard tubes of all sizes to keep them under control. I use mailing tubes to store plastic grocery bags and paper towel tubes to hold smaller produce size bags. The big basket on the floor is for large bags. I only transfer long-term dry goods in containers – flour, sugar, dog treats, etc. Everything else stays in its own box. I hung three racks on one side wall to hold foil and sandwich bags. On the other side I added hooks to hang a few cleaning items. Label Hidden Storage I label all baskets and containers. That way everybody can easily find them. Some are tied on tags. This top shelf is where I store my 30 Minute Party Supplies – accessible but out of the way. Others are attached with brass fasteners or glued on. I make them on my computer using Microsoft Word and a favorite font. I then laminate them with self laminating sheets that I buy at the office supply store. This way they last longer and can be wiped clean. To learn more on how I make my laminated labels, click here. And yes, I do have an entire basket filled with colored sprinkles. Ya never know when you are going to need a certain color. Make it Pretty – Budget Update Now that my pantry is customized, organized, and labeled I wanted to make it pretty, but had no budget to do it. I like the white walls, but wanted to show you an easy way to add some color without the time and expense it would take to paint or wallpaper. This could be as permanent or as temporary as you want it to be. I went to Walmart and bought 2 rolls of giftwrap and found 3 marked down rolls of black ribbon – exactly the amount I needed to add to the edge of the shelves with silver tacks that I had. When that happens I always say to myself that is was meant to be. I would have loved to have added trim molding to the edge of each shelf, but I am thrilled with my budget ribbon version. I trimmed the edge of each shelf with ribbon and silver tacks. Ribbon can be added to any shelf in your home for a little luxe. Look around your home – bookshelves, linen closets, any shelf. It makes a nice inexpensive option in place of decorative molding. When I tire of it, I can easily remove it and I am back to my classic white walls. To attach the giftwrap to the walls, I simply cut each piece to the size of the back of each shelf. I then attached each section to the wall with GlueDots that scrapbookers use. It was very easy! I store mostly food and party supplies in my pantry, but I also store extra dinnerware, trays, cookbooks, candles, and all of my pitchers. I also always keep a bottle of wine wrapped and ready to go to give as a hostess gift when my hubby and I are invited to an impromptu get-together. Just a plain bag that I gussied up with some ribbon and a vintage earring. Ready to grab and go. So I may not have a big walk-in room pantry anymore, but after planning, organizing, labeling, and adding a touch of pattern – I do have a pantry that I am very happy with. Do you have a large cabinet or closet that can be transformed in your house? If not, how do you store your food stuff – any tips or tricks that help you stay organized in the kitchen?

Chapter 3 : Small Space Combination Laundry Room Powder Bathroom Refresh - Fox Hollow Cottage

A Shelf in Woop's Clothing by Professor Mac Wellman starting at $ A Shelf in Woop's Clothing has 1 available editions to buy at Alibris.

National Electrical Code NEC typically defines rooms and areas based on the "intended" use of the area. They do not provide a definition for a "storage room", but they do provide a definition for a "clothes closet". A non-habitable room or space intended primarily for storage of garments and apparel. Sufficient access and working space shall be provided and maintained about all electrical equipment to permit ready and safe operation and maintenance of such equipment. This section says the depth of Working Space must be between 3 and 4 feet, "measured from the exposed live parts or from the enclosure or opening if the live parts are enclosed". This section says the width of Working Space must be the width of the equipment or 30", whichever is greater. And that there should be enough Working Space to allow the equipment door to open 90 degrees. There is an exception to this which says: In existing dwelling units, service equipment or panelboards that do not exceed amperes shall be permitted in spaces where the headroom is less than 2. This section also says that any other equipment associated with the electrical installation "located above or below the equipment, cannot extend more than 6" beyond the front of the equipment. Working space required by this section shall not be used for storage. When normally enclosed live parts are exposed for inspection or servicing, the working space, if in a passageway or general open space, shall be suitably guarded. Which means the equipment can be in an area used for storage, but the Working Space cannot be used for storage. As long as you keep this Working Space clear, you should have no problems. However, there are a few more things to consider. At least one entrance of sufficient area shall be provided to give access to and egress from working space about electrical equipment. Another important consideration is lighting. This is a section that is often overlooked in residential situations, and is often satisfied simply by having lights in the room where the service panel is installed. Personally, I take this section seriously. I recommend installing a dedicated circuit, consisting of a single switch and a single luminaire. Then installing it just above the equipment, as to provide adequate light for anybody working on the equipment. Putting the luminaire on a dedicated circuit allows you to deenergize other circuits, while maintaining good lighting while servicing the equipment. This unit can be installed on the same dedicated equipment luminaire circuit. Provide "sufficient area" for entrance to and egress from the equipment see local building codes to determine "sufficient area". Make sure the area has enough lighting. Rooms are defined by intended use.
