His leadership however does tend to cause tension, especially with Lola and Daffy. Depicted as the brainstormer, because he comes up with ideas when the others are fresh out of them. He is very sensitive about his small frame which he must overcome in most episodes centered around him and curious about what he encounters. Often, he always wants his personal gain. When he does not get what he wants he believes he is treated unfairly, not noticing the inconvenience inflicted on the others. But half the time he does show and mean good intent. Her independence is greater than the others and she has more boyish tendencies than the other girls. He has a sense of fun which exceeds all the others. At times, he is shy and anxious, and he makes an easy target for Daffy to hoax and trade with. He is rarely seen using his claws. He likes to get attention from Granny more than the others. Sylvester is afraid of lightning and he hates pickles. She is more intelligent than the other babies with insatiable curiosity. In the episode "Let Harder They Fall", she is no longer wearing diaper anymore like other babies but by the time Petunia wears yellow, frilly training underpants with a white bow in the middle and "Petunia the Piggy Bank", she learned to save money. Being the only adult in their lives, the babies are fascinated and inspired by her intelligence, wisdom and ability to overcome problems when they arise with ease. Sometimes he is overwhelmed by the responsibility he takes on the babies, but he is determined never to let Granny down. He often keeps an eye on one of the individual babies in each episode during Season 2. Penelope Pussycat is only shown in still portraits. Also, there is Baby Marvin in "War of the Weirds". Music[edit] Underscoring for the series was written by veteran animation composers Steven Bernstein and Julie Bernstein.

Between and , Merrie Melodies were produced in color and Looney Tunes in black and white. After , both series were produced in color and became virtually indistinguishable, varying only in their opening theme music and titles. Both series made use of the various Warner Bros. Warner made a deal with Leon Schlesinger to produce cartoons for them. Schlesinger hired Rudolf Ising and Hugh Harman to produce the first series of cartoons. A new character called Buddy became the only star of the Looney Tunes series for a couple of years. Beans was later phased out when his popularity declined, leaving Porky as the only star of the Schlesinger studio. More star characters and switch to color[edit] The debuts of other memorable Looney Tunes stars followed: Schlesinger began to phase in the production of color Looney Tunes with the cartoon The Hep Cat. Schlesinger sold his interest in the cartoon studio in to Warner Bros. The shorts from this era can be identified by their different title sequence, featuring stylized limited animation and graphics on a black background and a new arrangement, by William Lava , of "The Merry-Go-Round Broke Down". The change in the introductory title cards was possibly to reflect the switch in the animation style of the shorts themselves. However, the Looney Tunes shorts were edited, removing scenes of violence particularly suicidal gags and scenes of characters doing dangerous stunts that impressionable viewers could easily imitate , racial and ethnic caricatures including stereotypical portrayals of African-Americans, Mexicans, Jews, Native Americans, Asians, and Germans as Nazis , and questionable vices such as smoking cigarettes, ingesting pills, and drinking alcohol. Theatrical animated shorts went dormant until , when new shorts were made to introduce Looney Tunes to a new generation of audiences. New Looney Tunes shorts have been produced and released sporadically for theaters since then, usually as promotional tie-ins with various family movies produced by Warner Bros. While many of them have been released in limited releases theatrically for Academy Award consideration, only a few have gotten theatrical releases with movies. After the Gurnee park was sold to Six Flags , they also claimed the rights to use the characters at the other Six Flags parks, which they continue to do presently. It is the only time in which Looney Tunes characters have shared screen time with their rivals at Disney producers of the film "particlarly in the scenes where Bugs and Mickey Mouse are skydiving, and when Daffy and Donald Duck are performing their "Dueling Pianos" sequence. The gang also made frequent cameos in the spinoff series Tiny Toon Adventures , from executive producer Steven Spielberg , where they played teachers and mentors to a younger generation of cartoon characters Plucky Duck , Hamton J. Pig , Babs and Buster Bunny , etc. Immediately prior to this decision, Looney Tunes shorts were airing on several networks at once: The latter two had been particularly long-running series, and the Warner Bros. In , another feature film was released, this time in an attempt to recapture the spirit of the original shorts: Coming from Warner Bros. Animation and producer Sam Register , the concept revolves around Bugs and Daffy leaving the woods and moving to the suburbs with "colorful neighbors" including Sylvester, Tweety, Granny, Yosemite Sam, etc. The show also features 2-minute music videos titled respectfully "Merrie Melodies" as a tribute to the Looney Tunes sister shorts which features the characters singing original songs, as well as CGI animated shorts starring Wile E. Coyote and the Road Runner which were removed after the first season. The series was cancelled after its second season. Coyote and the Road Runner returned to the big screen in a series of 3-D shorts that preceded select Warner Bros. The Revenge of Kitty Galore , which was released on July 30, On June 8, , Warner Bros.
