Wikipedia The Dark River [Novel. An Englishman named Alan Hardie arrives in Tahiti for what turns out to be a permanent visit. The novel has a very straightforward plot, "but as a travelogue of Tahiti and the Tuamotus it makes almost anybody in a disheartened pre-war world feel like getting away from it all while there is yet time. Bond reappears in London after months of absence: But he recovers, and is sent to Jamaica on a dangerous and important mission. An opera singer spends a weekend at Lake Tahoe in the company of four previous husbands, and a prospective future one. Murder makes an appearance: The "Power-House" has nothing to do with electricity: The novel was, our author states, "written in the smooth days before the war"; in he published it in book form "in the hope that it may enable an honest man here and there to forget for an hour the too urgent realities. Our detective is in California, and so is Sir Frederic Bruce of Scotland Yard, pursuing a cold case -- which now seems be heating up! Fearn, John Russell [English science fiction author] Wikipedia The Encyclopedia of Science Fiction Menace from the Microcosm June [Science fiction novella, not about giant worlds in outer space, but about microworlds closer to us. It gave me great pleasure to debate the possibilities while I wrote it; I hope that some of you at least will have an equal pleasure in reading it. Not just published, but summarized! It takes place in the distant future, when there has been a good deal of space colonization. Thirty-seven of his criminal investigations as set down by R. The Missing Mortgagee [Mystery story. Normally life insurance is a relatively straightforward affair -- but not always! If, to start with, the insured has mortgaged the policy to a moneylender. It is the story of Gypsy and his wife Ginger, their wedding, honeymoon, and many subsequent adventures. Written with the skill and light touch that would set Farjeon apart throughout her remarkable career. With illustrations by the celebrated English painter and illustrator C.

University of Massachusetts Press, c Description Book – ix, p. Summary A world libertarian: John Glover Jackson Portrait of a liberation scholar: John Henrik Clarke A lifetime of inquiry: Writing about African Americans in American history: Clair Drake Blending scholarship with public service: Weaver Pursuing fieldwork in African American communities: Clark Personal reflections on W. Herbert Aptheker Catching history on the wing: This volume records the testimony of 11 scholar-activists who challenged prevailing racial beliefs and practices while engaging in resistance and reform. The group includes nine African Americans Kenneth B. Weaver , one Sri Lankan who lives and works in Britain A. Sivanandan and one white American Herbert Aptheker. Most of these men began their careers before World War II, in a time when biological conceptions of race dominated public policy and severely limited the opportunities available to people of colour. By struggling with these impediments in their personal and professional lives, each, in his own way, helped redefine race as the social and cultural construct it has always been. To highlight both the similarities and differences in their experiences, the editors asked each of the subjects the same set of general questions about formative influences, major obstacles and principal accomplishments. These were followed by more narrowly focused queries about specific writings. Most of the responses were recorded on tape as interviews; several were submitted as written reminiscences; and one, the essay on Du Bois, as the shared recollection of two associates who had worked closely with him for many years. The result is a singular collection of autobiographical accounts that not only testify to the personal courage of these individuals in overcoming the ravages of racism, but also document their contributions to the establishment of a vital anti-racist tradition in American thought and culture.
