

Chapter 1 : Beyond the 7 wonders of the world - Times of India

Beyond is an episode of The Animatrix written and directed by Koji Morimoto. It follows a teenage girl, Yoko (Hedy Burress), looking for her cat Yuki. While asking around the neighborhood, indicatively somewhere in Japan, she meets a group of younger kids.

Beyond the 7 wonders of the world Beyond the 7 wonders of the world With God as the artist, Times Travel explores some of the most awe inspiring natural wonders of the world. TNN Jun 22, , Victoria Falls, Africa Standing in front of the Victoria Falls in Zambia, there is little to stop you from marvelling at the divine artistry visible around. The same goes for numerous other natural landscapes and phenomenons, from skyscraper dwarfing mountains of the Himalayas to the melody of colour of the Aurora Borealis. Spread kms long and kms wide, the canyon was created by continuous erosion of the land by the Colorado River. This area of Arizona is also home to various native American tribes who live in the caves of the canyon or along the banks of the river that winds its way through. With the Colorado river passing through for over 17 million years, the area has also exposed various layers of ancient rock which tell researchers something about geologic history. The Grand Canyon National Park situated here is home to various animals and plants and is a good place to spot the bald eagle. Travellers to the Grand Canyon can explore the area through walking treks with qualified guides or helicopter tours. More adventurous travellers take to the river with their rafts and kayaks. The stone here has weathered and corroded under pressure from the water currents, creating a cathedral of marble. The passageways and caverns formed over vast stretches of time are sometimes large enough for small boats to glide through, albeit precariously. It does not take long to get enchanted by Las Cavernas de Marmol as this exquisite labyrinth is known locally. This table top mountain is part of a series that date back over two billions years. With meter-tall cliffs the mountain is home to its very own species of plants and insects. Explorers have also found caves with unique designs made by microbes eating their way into the silica walls. The stretch of flat saline ground gets a mirror like surface from the water that forms a layer over the salt and is able to clearly reflect the sky above. In the middle of the salt flat is the Incahuasi Island "a brown spot on this sheet of white. The arid island is covered in cacti and has a tourist centre for those visiting. The salt flat is also a stop over for arge flocks of pink flamingos and their flight over the reflective surface makes for beautiful photographs. Credit this to the giant limestone structures that look like pine trees from a distance or the various endemic species of flora and fauna that can only be found in Tsingy De Bemaraha and nowhere else in the world. Animals, insects and plants are still being discovered in its dense forests and wet caves, so a visit here is sure to surprise you. Satffa, Scotland Many visitors to the island of Staffa in Scotland refuse to believe that the phenomenon of its pillared stone formations are natural. Pamukkale, Turkey Turkey has numerous wonders but none can doubt the breath stealing ability of Pamukkale cotton castle. At first glance the stepped hills look snow blanketed. Tourists visit Pamukkale to bathe in its mineral springs.

'Beyond The Matrix' by Stephen Faller If you have seen any of the three 'Matrix' films, then you are aware of their complex nature. Afterwards, one walks around the world and wonders: 'What did that mean?' or 'What did I miss?' or 'What does that name mean?'

Contributing writer for Wake Up World Many well meaning activists and people are raising awareness about the issues our world and humanity are facing. That is definitely needed and necessary. In order to act consciously with the intention of awakening, it is necessary to know the nature of the forces which keep man in a state of sleep. First of all it must be realized that the sleep in which man exists is not normal but hypnotic sleep. Man is hypnotized and this hypnotic state is continually maintained and strengthened in him. One would think that there are forces for whom it is useful and profitable to keep man in a hypnotic state and prevent him from seeing the truth and understanding his position. Gurdjieff Have you ever wondered why there are always wars, atrocities and control mechanisms but nothing really changes? It just re-arranges with different faces and disguises. Like in a prison cell, the tapestry changes but the invisible prison is still there. They see earth and humans as their property and farm, raising us like cattle to be fed upon. Understanding the Hyperdimensional Matrix Control System is key in this day in age for anyone who wants to awaken and have a better world. Sincere self-work and de-programming oneself from consensus reality is also part of it, for that is the path to connect with our spiritual nature, our sovereign embodied self, connected to the Divine within in order to transcend the mutant Matrix and connecting to our original blue print. Disillusionment is an inevitable part of the process, but the only way out is through. Ignorance is not bliss, nor is it protection. Our ego, boasting of freedom, is at every moment the slave, toy and puppet of countless beings, powers, forces, influences in universal Nature. All life is the play of universal forces. The individual gives a personal form to these universal forces. But he can choose whether he shall respond or not to the action of a particular force. Only most people do not really choose – they indulge the play of the forces. Your illnesses, depressions, etc. It is only when one can make oneself free of them that one can be the true person and have a true life – but one can be free only by living in the Divine. The key in it all in order to transcend the matrix is not only knowledge of what the matrix actually is beyond its 3D manifestation but most importantly sincere self-work, shadow work, embodiment and emotional intelligence in order to anchor the higher frequency of pure and true love, connected to our wholeness within and the wholeness of nature. Love is Light is Knowledge and the gateway to receive Gnosis, higher Knowledge that cannot be perceived via the five senses or our petty little minds. Many are called, few chose to answer the call. And never, ever give into fear.

Chapter 3 : Visiting the New Seven Wonders of the World and Beyond | Cox & Kings

This is the building where most of the spiritual research has been undertaken. Nestled in the heart of Goa among forests and fields, it is home to many committed seekers of God who have a quest to understand the spiritual dimension.

The term Seven Wonders of the World denotes works regarded by ancient Greeks and Romans as the most remarkable structures up to their day. Conduct a project in which students will evaluate which works of sculpture, architecture, and landscaping that postdate ancient Greece and Rome merit the label wonder of the world. Begin by working with students to figure out what starting date they should select to indicate "the period after ancient Greece and Rome"? Be open, however, to other dates suggested by students for the fall of the Roman Empire if they can offer persuasive facts and logical thinking. Proceed by drawing up a list with students of the criteria that ancient Greeks and Romans seemed to use in putting a work on the list of the original seven wonders of the world: If students are blocked, initiate the list by suggesting monumentality or complexity of construction. Tell students they will research major works of sculpture, architecture, and landscaping from the period that begins with the fall of the Roman Empire and continues up to, say, Consider assigning groups of students to specific historic periods or regions of the world so that the class as a whole conducts research in a comprehensive manner. Such periods and regions might include the following: Direct students to printed books, electronic sources, and other materials such as travelogues in which they can read about and see photographs, drawings, or paintings of buildings, monuments, or landscaping of a period or region. Ask each group, based on its research into a period or region of the world, to nominate a certain number of works of architecture, sculpture, or landscaping as candidates for the label wonder of the world. You may want each group to hand in a list of reviewed sources and give the class an oral presentation with visuals of each work they nominate. In that report, each group should also state which criteria of greatness beyond those already on the list see second step, above led them to nominate these works. Keep a running tally of all criteria. Some criteria might be endurance for more than five hundred years, usefulness, beauty, originality, religious significance, and so forth. When all groups have made their presentations and you have a list of nominations and b a list of criteria for nomination, involve the class in devising a simple way for judging the nominees against one another and for determining which qualify as a wonder. One approach is to create a matrix with the horizontal axis labeled criteria and the vertical axis candidates. Then ask the class to decide on a scoring systemâ€”that is, how many of the criteria does a work have to exhibit in order to qualify as a wonder? Give each work a check mark for each criterion it exhibits. How many additional wonders of the world has the class has come up with?

Please help improve it by removing unnecessary details and making it more concise. The short is a direct prequel leading into the events of The Matrix Reloaded. Immediately after cutting the other down to their underwear, they lift their blindfolds to peek at the other. As the two are about to kiss, they are interrupted by an alarm and the simulation ends. In the next scene, the hovercraft Osiris is headed for Junction 21 when Robbie Tom Kenny, the operator, picks up an army of Sentinels on his HR scans. The ship flees into an uncharted tunnel, where it encounters a smaller group of Sentinels patrolling the area. The crew members man the onboard guns and destroy the patrol. The ship then emerges on the surface, four kilometers directly above Zion and close to the Sentinel army. There, the crew members see that the Machines are using gigantic drills to tunnel their way down to Zion. The Sentinel army soon detects the Osiris and pursues the ship. Thadeus decides Zion must be warned, and his shipmate Jue volunteers to broadcast herself into the Matrix to deliver the warning while the ship is doggedly pursued. Knowing that they are not going to make it, Jue and Thadeus admit to peeking at each other in the VR simulation before kissing farewell. Entering the Matrix on a high rooftop, Jue jumps off and acrobatically makes her way down through power poles between two buildings. When she lands in the alley below, a ripple effect is created by her impact. She drops off a package into a mail box; the package sets the prologue for the video game Enter the Matrix. She attempts to contact Thadeus via a cell phone as the Osiris is overrun by Sentinels and crashes. The Sentinels tear their way into the ship. At the time of the call, Thadeus is making a last stand to hold off the Sentinels. Shortly after Jue says "Thadeus" over her cell phone, the Osiris explodes, destroying many of the pursuing Sentinels and the crew. In the Matrix, Jue falls to the ground, dead, her body having been destroyed on the ship. He used Bits and Pieces of Information written by The Wachowskis as a prequel to the series as a base for the first part. In the early-to-mid twenty-first century, humanity successfully develops Artificial intelligence, and soon builds an entire race of sentient AI robots to serve them. With increasing numbers of people released from all labor, much of the human population has become lazy, arrogant, and corrupt. Despite this, the machines were content with serving humanity and, as the narrator states, "for a time, it [the status quo] was good". This phrase is a reference to one of the most famous phrases of Genesis, consistent with the Biblical references seen throughout the original Matrix films, and is one of numerous references to Genesis in particular present in "Second Renaissance". The relationship between humans and machines changes in the year, when a domestic android is threatened by its owner. The android, named BER a reference to Bigger Thomas, then kills the owner, his pets, and a mechanic instructed to deactivate the robot. This murder is the first incident of an artificially intelligent machine killing a human. BER is arrested and put on trial, but justifies the crime as self-defense, stating that it "simply did not want to die". During the trial scene, there is a voice-over of Clarence Drummond the defense attorney; whose name is a dual reference to Clarence Darrow and Henry Drummond, the Darrow analogue from Inherit the Wind quoting a famous line from the Dred Scott v. Sandford case in his closing statement, which implicitly ruled that African Americans were not entitled to citizenship under United States law. On the contrary, they were at that time considered as a subordinate and inferior class of beings Across the industrialized world, mass civil disturbances erupt when robots along with their human supporters and sympathizers all rise in protest. Rioting and protests such as The Million Machine March unfold across the United States and the authorities start to use deadly force against the machines and their human supporters. World leaders fear a robot rebellion as well as a schism with humanity, and governments across the world initiate a major program to destroy all humanoid machines. Some robots escape destruction, however, because humans still want or need them to produce things. The surviving robots leave in a mass exodus with the aid of their human allies[citation needed] and build their own new nation together in the Mesopotamia according to the narration, "the cradle of civilization ". They name their new nation Zero

One or "01", the numerals used in binary notation. Zero One sends two ambassadors to the U. However, it is narrated, this would not be the last time the machines would take the floor there. World nations, their power waning, agree to start an economic blockade of Zero One. The Zero One leaders retaliate by declaring war on the rest of the world, and their armies advance in all directions. The enemy human nations are hampered by the fact that so much of their industrial base had already become so heavily reliant upon Zero One, and one by one, the rest of mankind surrendered each of its territories. As the machines advance into Eastern Europe, the desperate human rulers seek a final solution, codenamed: Heavy losses are suffered by both sides during the ensuing struggle, but the machines gradually gain the upper hand. The original robots are destroyed early on in the conflict, being armed with human weapons rather than the powerful weapons of the different, more sinister types to follow. Legions of new models of machines, no longer in humanoid form and appearing more like the insectoid or cephalopod-like Sentinels and others of the Matrix films, overrun the enemy human armies. This coincides with the destruction of original man-made robots at the hands of the enemy human forces and, as a result, the further dehumanization of the rapidly emerging machine collective. Knowing there is no other choice, the machines accept this as both their only chance and a symbol of their eternal union. As the machine armies, now armed with their new power source via their new symbiotic union with their human allies, swarm across the enemy human defenses; the United Nations, in desperation, has numerous nuclear warheads fired directly at the approaching armies, vaporizing their own troops in the process. Hand over your flesh, and a new world awaits you. The machines, having won a Pyrrhic victory, turn to the defeated humans, and begin utilizing the bio-electric, chemical and kinetic energy of the human body. While the machines were more than capable of generating power from alternative power sources, the collective sedation of humankind was a final act of mercy to keep the humans down without outright destroying them. It is the only one of the animated shorts contained in The Animatrix in which Neo appears. The scene takes place during the six-month gap between The Matrix and The Matrix: Reloaded, during which time Neo has joined the crew of the Nebuchadnezzar and is helping the rebels to free other humans from the Matrix. Kid Clayton Watson is a disaffected teenager who feels there is something wrong with the world, frequenting hacker chat rooms [citation needed] on the internet and wondering if he is alone and questioning about reality. In school, he absent-mindedly scribbles "Neo lives" and other references to Morpheus and Trinity in his notebook. That day, he receives a call from his turned-off cell phone, warning him that a band of Agents is coming for him and is chased through his high school, before ultimately being cornered on the roof. He asserts his faith in Neo, and throws himself from the roof, whereupon the other characters are shown holding his funeral. The scene fades up from black as the Kid awakens in the real world to see Neo and Trinity watching over him. They remark that he has achieved "self substantiation" removing oneself from the Matrix without external aid, which was considered impossible. The character designs were done by Yutaka Minowa. It follows the protagonist, "Cis" Hedy Burress, who is engaged in her "favorite simulation": After she successfully eliminates an attacking enemy cavalry, a lone samurai appears whom Cis recognizes as "Duo" Phil LaMarr. During the course of their duel, Duo briefly disarms Cis. He questions her concentration and wonders whether she regrets taking the Red Pill that took them out of the "peaceful life of the virtual world". It is at this point that Duo states that he has "something to say". Duo reasons that reality is harsh and that he is tired of it. He adds that the Machines can make the both of them forget the truth. Duo then states that he has contacted the Machines. He asks Cis to return with him to the Matrix, but she continues to refuse. As Duo becomes more aggressive in his arguments for returning, Cis attempts to escape while simultaneously warding off his attacks. Becoming increasingly uncomfortable with the situation, Cis requests an operator in order to exit the simulation. Duo tells her that no one can hear her and reiterates that it "is already done". Thereafter their fighting becomes much more serious and forceful as they move from rooftop to rooftop. Duo, in a flying leap, attacks her from above with his sword. As the blade comes towards her, Cis, standing her ground, concentrates and halts its forward motion inches from her face and breaks it. She takes the broken end of the blade and thrusts it into Duo. Duo states his love for her as he dies. Suddenly, she wakes from the program and discovers that the encounter with Duo was a test program devised for training purposes. Clearly upset, she punches him in the face and walks away. He remarks that "aside from that last part", she passed the test. The beginning of this short includes a short narration from the Instructor implying that this short is a Zion Archive file [original research? Only exceptional humans tend to become aware of the Matrix: This is not without exceptions, given that "Some attain this wisdom through wholly different means. He has set a world record time of 8. He decides to compete again and break his own record to "prove them wrong. Dan is adamant on racing. On the day of the race, he is monitored by four Agents located in the stadium. The race begins and Dan starts off strong. However, the muscles in his leg violently rupture, putting him at a setback and scaring many of the people in the stands. Through strong willpower, Dan ignores the injury and runs much faster than he did before, easily passing the other athletes. Before he can cross the finish line, the Agents detect that his signal is getting unstable in the Matrix due to his massive burst of energy. Three of the agents possess the three closest runners and try to stop him, but are unable to catch up to him. A Sentinel employs electrical restraints to secure him back in his pod. Despite this, he easily wins the race and breaks his original time of 8. The next scene shows a crippled Dan being wheeled through a hospital. However, Dan quietly whispers the word "Free", angering the agent.

*Brand new Single from Beyond the Bridge from the f*cking awesome The Old Man and The Spirit album!*

These think tanks virtually created the new conservative movement of the s. The actual agenda of these corporate-funded think tanks is to a decrease government regulation of big business, b decrease taxes for corporations and for the rich, c destroy the unions, and d increase profits. Conservative think tanks usually have more money than progressive ones, because the right is willing to serve wealthy corporate interests. Conservative pundits are often quite willing to sell their services. As intellectuals for hire, the right offers journalists mouthpieces for corporate America with the veneer of neutrality provided under the guise of a think tank. The pro-business Right understood that changing media was a crucial part of bringing right-wing ideas into prominence and their politicians into power. These "think tanks" manufacture debate. Their aim is to create the illusion of controversy, even when the facts are indisputable, because they know how enslaved contemporary journalism is by the tyranny of false equivalence. It is not necessary to be right; to make the sale, it is only necessary to get attention. Propaganda and the New Face of American Politics" "Corporations and corporate foundations fund think tanks which formulate policies which will be favorable to business. Corporate attorneys draft legislation which will make those policies the law of the land. Corporate political action committees pay for the election campaigns of the politicians who ensure that such legislation becomes law, and lobbyists make sure the politicians stay bought. National and multilateral trade and development agencies design and subsidize an international trading system dominated by the largest corporations. Governments and banks use public monies to subsidize and insure corporate investment. Individuals from these think tanks move in and out of the policy-making circles, creating a revolving door between the policy-planners and those that implement them. The think tanks, in this context, are essentially the intellectual engines of the American Empire. Instead, they sought to subordinate the economies of Third World nations by rolling back development programs and weakening the political efficacy of their governments. The goal has been to create a world free for maximizing profits irrespective of the human and environmental costs. One rollback weapon is the debt. Third World governments are burdened with huge debts and desperately strapped for funds. In order to meet payments and receive new credits from the U. Wall Street routinely invaded country after country. The domestic banking system was put on the auction block and reorganized under the surveillance of external creditors. National financial institutions were systematically destabilized and driven out of business; mass unemployment and poverty are the invariable results. And it really is the financial power clique that keeps countries poor. Why does poverty continue? Because it has a purpose. From the young boys I met in the demobilization camps in Sierra Leone to the suicide bombers of Palestine and Chechnya, to the young terrorists who fly planes into the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, we can no longer afford to ignore them. We have to take concrete steps to remove the causes of their rage, or we have to be prepared to suffer the consequences. The money never actually goes to the country. It goes instead to US corporations, who build big infrastructure projects -- power grids, industrial parks, harbors, highways -- things that benefit a few very rich people but do not reach the poor at all. So at some point in time, we economic hit men go back to the country and say, Sell your oil real cheap to our oil companies. If the jackals also fail, then and only then does the military go in. Although those at the very pinnacle of the economic pyramid gain the most, millions of us depend - either directly or indirectly - on the exploitation of the LDCs [Less-Developed Countris] for our livelihoods. The resources and cheap labor that feed nearly all our businesses come from places like Indonesia, and very little ever makes its way back. They will have to allow our corporations to ravage their natural resources and will have to forego education, health, and other social services merely to pay us back. The fact that our own companies already received most this money to build the power plants, airports, and industrial parks does not factor into this formula. Does the excuse that most Americans are unaware of this constitute innocence? Uninformed and intentionally misinformed, yes - but innocent? All four involved reliance on proxies who were also major international drug traffickers. The American habit of training, arming, and financing its drug-trafficking allies in order to help secure oil resources abroad has been a major factor in the huge increase in global illicit drug trafficking since World War II. As with the Anglo-American bankers in the post-First World War Versailles reparations debt process, the debt was merely a vehicle to establish de facto economic control over entire sovereign countries. So, when push comes to shove, the wealthy classes of Third World countries, with a great deal of help from the corporate-military-political elites in our country, will use fascism to preserve capitalism while claiming they are saving democracy from communism. Over half the people in the world survive on less than two dollars per day, which is roughly the same amount they received in the early s. Meanwhile, the top 1 percent of third world households accounts for 70 to 90 percent of all private financial wealth and real estate ownership in their country; the actual percentage depends on the specific country. The strategy was to force the price of the cartelized world oil up by about a factor of four, recover the Arab oil receipts back into the British and American central banks, and lend them to the Third World to acquire control over those countries. The great bulk of the petro-dollars were repatriated in purchasing U. From there they were loaned to the Third World, which could not otherwise buy the fuel they needed to survive, whence many of those countries became enslaved to the bankers, and forced to follow their edicts on how to run their countries. We simply wanted to control resources. Third world politicians at that time had a different view about their international role, however. They regarded political independence as merely one essential step in the path of growth and development. They sought generalized technological advance, which should be coterminous with diversification of agriculture and the insertion of such infrastructure as would lead to the industrialization, and thereby closing of the huge gaps that separated the different worlds. Led by Britain and France, the economic theorists of the First World determined that the export receipts of the Third World should decide the pace and quality of development and, when these fell below expectations, resort should be had to the Bretton Woods system whose machinery had been set up in the late s. Above all, this meant the requirement of the stamp-of-approval of the International Monetary Fund IMF and submission to the barbarous conditionalities which were the underpinning of IMF intervention. The United Nations was chosen as the arena where it was hoped that a new era of global cooperation would emerge. These hopes were never realized. The IMF insisted on austere programs based on currency devaluations which increased misery in the Third World, was directly responsible for the spread of disease and was also successful in encouraging drug cultivation, as those unfortunate countries sought the chimera of a quick cash crop as a panacea for their fiscal difficulties. In the process, the US bombed some 25 countries, caused the end of life for several million people, and condemned many millions more to a life of agony and despair. The avowed objective of these military interventions has been to effect "regime change". The cloaks of "human rights" and of "democracy" were invariably evoked to justify what were unilateral and illegal acts. You murder priests that is, priests and other religiously oriented groups who are involved too much with the concerns of the people - i. And that improves the investment climate. American leaders may make mistakes, they may blunder, they may even on the odd occasion cause more harm than good, but they do mean well. Their intentions are always honorable. Of that Americans are certain. If the country in question is of any possible strategic value to the world powers, then it seems that everything from covert operations to the outright use of overwhelming force is fair game. If it is not, indifference is the order of the day. It was to give poison to Lumumba. But what we wish for our country, its right to an honorable life, to a spotless dignity, to an independence without restrictions, Belgian colonialism and its Western allies - who have found direct and indirect support, deliberate and not deliberate among certain high officials of the United Nations, this organization in which we placed all our confidence when we called for their assistance - have not wished it. History will one day have its say, but it will not be the history that Brussels, Paris, Washington or the United Nations will teach, but that which they will teach in the countries emancipated from colonialism and its puppets. Africa will write its own history, and it will be, to the north and to the south of the Sahara, a history of glory and dignity. When the words "god" and "prayer" are regularly invoked in their talks, while American Hellfire missiles are sent screaming into a city center or a village marketplace teeming with life Naomi Klein "The coup against Aristide, then, must be understood not in isolation, but as the culmination of activities that really began the minute he was re-elected in Destabilization efforts by the U. In tiny Guatemala, the Central Intelligence Agency mounted a coup overthrowing the democratically elected government in , and it backed subsequent rightwing governments against small leftist rebel groups for four decades. Roughly , civilians died. Noriega, who, for almost 20 years, was a valued informant for American intelligence. In part it has to do with a conscious desire to not risk American lives in ground combat. And in part, perhaps not entirely conscious, it has to do with not wishing to look upon the gory remains of the victims, allowing American GIs and TV viewers at home to cling to their warm fuzzy feelings about themselves and their government. We are hated because our government denies these things to people in Third World countries whose resources are coveted by our multinational corporations. That hatred we have sown has come back to haunt us in the form of terrorism and in the future, nuclear terrorism. Whatever other motives may have been involved, the Cold War provided the indispensable justification for intervention. And for all the rhetoric about democracy and human rights that U. By the end of the Cold War, Latin American security forces trained, funded, equipped, and incited by Washington had executed a reign of bloody terror - hundreds of thousands killed, an equal number tortured, millions driven into exile-from which the region has yet to fully recover. Presidents, cabinet secretaries, national security advisers, and CIA directors approved them, authorized by the law that created the CIA and assigned it "duties related to intelligence affecting the national security. Given the proper pretext, such bad examples have to be reduced to basket cases, or, where feasible, simply overthrown. Patrice McSherry in the book "Predatory States: Operation Condor and Covert War in Latin America" "The result of neo-colonialism is that foreign capital is used for the exploitation rather than for the development of the less developed parts of the world. Investment, under neo-colonialism, increases, rather than decreases, the gap between the rich and the poor countries of the world. The struggle against neo-colonialism is not aimed at excluding the capital of the developed world from operating in less developed countries. It is aimed at preventing the financial power of the developed countries being used in such a way as to impoverish the less developed. This list does not include a roughly equal number of failed coups, nor coups in Africa and elsewhere in which a U. President Zelaya was illegally taken to Costa Rica. Democracy in Honduras ended as a de facto government of the rich and powerful seized control. A sham election backed by the US confirmed the leadership of the coup powers. The US and powerful lobbyists continue to roam the hemisphere trying to convince other Latin American countries to normalize relations with the coup government. We are to continue to generate maximum pressure toward this end utilizing every appropriate resource. It is imperative that these actions be implemented clandestinely and securely so that United States Government and American hand be well hidden.

Chapter 6 : The Animatrix - Wikipedia

The essence of a Machu Picchu hike. Described as "an absolute masterpiece of architecture" and a unique testament to the Inca civilization, Machu Picchu, an ancient citadel built atop a mountain, is proudly one of the Seven Wonders of the World.

The oligarchy also controls the most influential alternative media news sources. But before such a merger can be consummated, and the United States becomes just another province in a New World Order, there must at least be the semblance of parity among the senior partners in the deal. How does one make the nations of the world more nearly equal? The Insiders determined that a two-prong approach was needed; use American money and know-how to build up your competitors, while at the same time use every devious strategy you can devise to weaken and impoverish this country. The goal is not to bankrupt the United States. Rather, it is to reduce our productive might, and therefore our standard of living, to the meager subsistence level of the socialized nations of the world. The plan is not to bring the standard of living in less developed countries up to our level, but to bring ours down to meet theirs coming up. It is your standard of living which must be sacrificed on the altar of the New World Order. The establishment of a common money. The United States must be prepared to make sacrifices afterward in setting up a world politico-economic order which would level off inequalities of economic opportunity with respect to nations. The capitalists owned everything in the world, and everyone else was their slave. They owned all the land, all the houses, all the factories, and all the money. If anyone disobeyed them they could throw him into prison, or they could take his job away and starve him to death. The middle class is targeted for elimination, because most of the world has no middle class, and to fully integrate and internationalize a middle class, would require industrialization and development in Africa, and certain places in Asia and Latin America. The goal of the Superclass is not to lose their wealth and power to a transnational middle class, but rather to extinguish the notion of a middle class, and transnationalize a lower, uneducated, labor oriented class, through which they will secure ultimate wealth and power. The global economic crisis serves these ends, as whatever remaining wealth the middle class holds is in the process of being eliminated, and as the crisis progresses, the middle classes of the world will suffer, while a great percentage of lower classes of the world, poverty-stricken even prior to the crisis, will suffer the greatest, most probably leading to a massive reduction in population levels, particularly in the "underdeveloped" or "Third World" states. Their sphere of activity extends over the entire globe, and even beyond, their ambition and greed for wealth and power knows no bounds, and for them, most of mankind is "human garbage. We are not interested in the good of others; we are interested solely in power. Not wealth or luxury or long life or happiness: We are different from all the oligarchies of the past, in that we know what we are doing. All the others, even those who resembled ourselves, were cowards and hypocrites. The German Nazis and the Russian Communists came very close to us in their methods, but they never had the courage to recognize their own motives. They pretended, perhaps they even believed, that they had seized power unwillingly and for a limited time, and that just round the corner there lay a paradise where human beings would be free and equal. We are not like that. We know that no one ever seizes power with the intention of relinquishing it. Power is not a means; it is an end. One does not establish a dictatorship in order to safeguard a revolution; one makes the revolution in order to establish the dictatorship. The object of persecution is persecution. The object of torture is torture. The object of power is power. The only difference is that in this case, the monopoly is operated by the government. But what if an international banker, through loans to the state, manipulation of a central bank, campaign contributions, or bribes, is able to achieve dominion over a government? In that case, he would find socialism welcome, for it would serve him as an instrument to control society. You know it and I know it. There is not one of you who dares to write your honest opinions, and if you did, you know beforehand that it would never appear in print. I am paid weekly for keeping my honest opinion out of the paper I am connected with. Others of you are paid similar salaries for similar things, and any of you who would be so foolish as to write honest opinions would be out on the streets looking for another job. If I allowed my honest opinions to appear in one issue of my paper, before twenty-four hours my occupation would be gone. The business of the journalists is to destroy the truth, to lie outright, to pervert, to vilify, to fawn at the feet of mammon, and to sell his country and his race for his daily bread. You know it and I know it, and what folly is this toasting an independent press? We are the tools and vassals of rich men behind the scenes. We are the jumping jacks, they pull the strings and we dance. Our talents, our possibilities and our lives are all the property of other men. We are intellectual prostitutes. If you want a worldwide monopoly, you must control a world socialist government. That is what the game is all about. The Elite pits nations against each other, and aims at the destruction of religion and other traditional values, creates chaos, deliberately spreads poverty and misery, and then usurps power placing its stooges in place. Wars, "revolutions" and assassinations are part of their tactics to destroy traditional civilisation and traditional religions, amass wealth and power, eliminate opponents, and proceed relentlessly towards their avowed goal, generation after generation. They operate through covert and overt societies and organisations. We are forever desperate to believe that this time the government is telling us the truth.
