Add the bibliography to your paper. Even if you know very little about references, our forms and automatic citation features will guide you through the process and tell you what information is needed. This means less guessing for you and more accurate citations! On top of downloading citations to Microsoft Word, you will be able to save your work, create as many bibliographies as you want, and work faster with no ads. Premium accounts also let you check your paper for accidental plagiarism, so you can be more confident when turning it in. Launched in October, we began with the mission of helping students create perfect citations in a fraction of the time. Without even realizing it, you do it already in your everyday life in little ways. We do this because it gives credibility to what we say, but also because it credits the originator of the information and allows others to follow up if they need more information. Formal citing done for papers and projects takes this a step further. In addition to the reasons mentioned above, citing sources in academia provides evidence of your research process and helps you avoid plagiarism. Plagiarism is a word you never want to hear describing your work. What Are You Citing?: Answering this question is usually the first step in creating a citation. Cite This For Me has you covered. How Does This Work? Immediately start citing by clicking on the website or journal article icon. From there, a form will pop up and show you all of the information you should look for in your source. You can create a citation at any time and also go back and edit it as many times as you want. To help you save even more time and effort when citing websites, books, and journal articles, Cite This For Me will automatically find reference information and fill out some of the form for you. When citing these sources, you start off with a search bar that assists you in finding the source you are referencing. Did you know there are literally thousands of citations styles in the world? Fortunately, Cite This For Me has a lot of them! Understanding it All Beyond simply creating references or citations, most citation styles have additional guidelines about paper formatting, in-text citations, and other details. Cite This For Me citation guides covers a lot of this additional information, so your paper is more properly prepped and less likely to get points taken off for these details. Search What is the Harvard Referencing System? The popular Harvard format is typically used in assignments and publications for humanities as well as natural, social and behavioural sciences. It is a parenthetical referencing system that is made up of two main components: Each entry should be keyed to a corresponding parenthetical reference in the main body of your work, so that a reader can take an in-text citation and quickly retrieve the source from your reference list. Note that some universities, and certain disciplines, may also require you to provide a bibliography. This is a detailed list of all of the material you have consulted throughout your research and preparation, and it will demonstrate the lengths you have gone to in researching your chosen topic. This author-date system appeals to both authors and readers of academic work. Scholars find the format an economical way of writing, and it is generally more accessible to the reader as there are no footnotes crowding the page. Only the name of the author, the publication date of the source and, if necessary, the page numbers are included in the parenthetical references, for example: Our guide can answer all of your questions and offer you a comprehensive introduction to the style. Sometimes, students do not encounter referencing until they embark onto degree-level studies, yet it is a crucial academic skill that will propel you towards establishing yourself in the academic community. Using this open-access generator to cite your sources enables you to cross the finish line in style. It is important to bear in mind that there is a plethora of different referencing styles out there - the use of any particular one depends on the preference of your university, subject, professor or the publication you are submitting the work to. To accurately create references in a specific format, simply sign up to Cite This For Me for free and select your chosen style. Are you struggling with referencing an unfamiliar source type? Or feeling confused about whether to cite a piece of common knowledge? Our Harvard reference generator and this guide will provide you with everything you need to get both your parenthetical references and reference list completed quickly and accurately. Why do I Need to Reference? Simply put - referencing is the citing of sources you have utilised to support your essay, research, conference, article etc. Even if you are using our Harvard referencing tool, understanding why you need to reference will go a long way in helping you to naturally integrate the process into your research and writing routine. Firstly, whenever another source contributes to your work you must give the original author the appropriate credit in order to avoid plagiarism, even when you have completely reworded the information. The only exception to this rule is common knowledge - e. London is the capital city of England. Whilst plagiarism is not always intentional, it is easy to accidentally plagiarise your work when you are under pressure from imminent deadlines, you have managed your time ineffectively, or if you lack confidence when putting ideas into your own words. The consequences can be severe; deduction of marks at best, expulsion from university or legal action from the original author at worst. Find out more here. This may sound overwhelming, but plagiarism can be easily avoided by using our Harvard referencing generator and carrying out your research and written work thoughtfully and responsibly. We have compiled a handy checklist to follow whilst you are working on an assignment. How to avoid plagiarism: Formulate a detailed plan - carefully outline both the relevant content you need to include, as well as how you plan on structuring your work Manage your time effectively - make use of time plans and targets, and give yourself enough time to read, write and proofread Keep track of your sources - record all of the relevant publication information as you go e. Academic writing values original thought that analyses and builds upon the ideas of other scholars. This will show your reader that you have delved deeply into your chosen topic and supported your thesis with expert opinions. When adopting Harvard style referencing in your work, if you are inserting a quote, statement, statistic or any other kind of source information into the main body of your essay you should: There are many assumptions when it comes to the information processing approach to cognitionâ€¦ Lutz and Huitt, In the overview of these developmental theories, Lutz and Huitt suggest thatâ€¦ If you are quoting a particular section of the source rather than the entire work, you should also include a page number or page range within the brackets after the date. The brief in-text Harvard references in your work should directly link to your reference list. Utilising and building on a wide range of relevant sources is a guaranteed way of impressing your reader, and a comprehensive list of the source material you have used is the perfect platform to exhibit your research efforts. Follow these Harvard referencing guidelines when compiling your reference list: For journal articles, the title of the journal should be printed in italics, rather than the title of the journal article. Capitalise the first letter of the publication title, the first letters of all main words in the title of a journal, and all first letters of a place name and publisher. As a general rule a Harvard reference list includes every source that you have cited in your work, whilst a bibliography also contains any relevant background reading which you have consulted even those sources that are never mentioned in the narrative. Your bibliography should start on its own page, with the same formatting as the rest of the paper and aligned to the left with the sources listed alphabetically. You may be required to provide a bibliography as well as a reference list, so check this with your tutor.

One author, book, multiple editions: From the big bang to black holes. Bantam Doubleday Dell Publishing Group. If all information resembles a book, use the template for a book reference. If a page number is unavailable, use chapter number. URL links are not necessary, but can be useful. When including a URL, include the date the book was downloaded at the end of the reference: Are you struggling to find all of the publication information to complete a reference? Did you know that our Harvard reference generator can do it for you? Sign in to your Cite This For Me account to save and export your reference list.

How to format in Harvard: The paper breaks away from previous uses of inconsistent and makeshift footnotes through its use of a parenthetical author-date citation accompanied by an explanatory footnote. Today Harvard referencing is widely considered one of the most accessible styles and is used across most subjects. The Evolution of the Harvard Referencing Style Due to its simplicity and ease of use, the format has become one of the most widely adopted citation styles in the world. However, many universities offer their own unique style guide, and each has its own nuances when it comes to punctuation, order of information and formatting rules. Make sure you apply consistency throughout your work. It is increasingly easy for writers to access information and knowledge via the internet, and in turn the Harvard referencing guidelines are continually updated to include developments in electronic publishing.

Key differences from previous Cite Them Right editions: Previous editions required printed books and eBooks to be referenced differently - in the 9th edition, both are now referenced using the same template if all the necessary information is available. An eBook is considered to be the digital format of a published book or a book that is only published in digital format that is meant for reading on an electronic device. URLs are no longer a requirement for digital media if the information provided in the reference is sufficient to find the source without it. They should be included if the source is difficult to find, or if pieces of information needed for Harvard referencing are missing. These days students draw on a diverse range of digital sources to support their written work.
