The band released their first live EP, entitled Recently, in 1992. Recently was re-released by RCA Records in 1995. Under the Table and Dreaming and its follow-up album, Crash brought the band national attention, culminating in 3 Grammy Awards. On October 28, 1996, the band released their first full-length live album, Live at Red Rocks 8. The album represented a great change in direction for the band as they did not rely on upbeat hit singles to carry the album. Dave Matthews has commented that the inspiration for this song came from the treatment of Native Americans by the United States government. On May 27, 1997, Taylor decided to leave the band for personal reasons. The year also provided two more Grammy nominations. With longtime producer Lillywhite at the helm, the band began work on a fourth studio album. In October 1997, an energized Matthews began writing with Glen Ballard, most famous for his work with Alanis Morissette. Carter Beauford has said that the album was a product of Matthews and Ballard, and that it did not showcase the rest of the band. The tracks spread quickly over established Internet channels such as Napster. Collectively known as The Lillywhite Sessions, these tracks were lauded by both the fan base and the popular press. In response to overwhelming fan support, coupled with a popular and widely publicized online campaign known as the Release Lillywhite Recordings Campaign, DMB returned to the studio in 1998 to record Busted Stuff. Busted Stuff hit the shelves on July 16, 1998. During these two years the band released two live albums. The first, Live in Chicago. The shows are very different from the normal DMB shows in that the venues were usually more intimate, and the song selection is very different. In 1999, Matthews and Tinsley released their first solo albums. Tinsley released True Reflections on June 17, 1999. However, only "Hello Again" was actually included on the subsequent album release, Stand Up. Things took off like a bat out of hell. The summer tour also marked the first time Rashawn Ross played with the band. DMB also played a short, 13 show tour in the fall. This fall tour featured the return of Christmas Song, Minarets both first played since 1992 and Linus and Lucy last played in 1994. The album features two discs, the first consisting of what the band considers their best studio tracks, and the second of live tracks voted on by fans. The tour was shorter than most Dave Matthews Band summer tours, with only 37 shows. This tour saw the live debut of songs that the band had been working on in the studio earlier in the year with Mark Batson, including "27", "Cornbread", as well as the dark and unique "A Dream So Real". The show was entitled "A Concert for Virginia Tech" and was done in memory of the shootings that took place on April 16, 1999. John Mayer, Phil Vassar, and Nas joined them. There were over 50,000 people in attendance. Though only 65,000 tickets were sold, 50,000 originally, then a second block of 15,000, nearly 20,000 people sneaked into the show, making it the largest one-day concert in Atlanta history. The show raised money for the Piedmont Park Conservancy Association. In a news article posted on August 30 on the official site, it was announced that a video for the song "Eh Hee" would be released for free download on the iTunes Store starting September 4, and remaining free throughout the week until it would be made available for purchase. The festival ultimately became the largest in Colorado history. On May 27, three days before the band embarked on their annual summer tour, it was announced that keyboardist Butch Taylor, who had toured with the band since 1992, had decided to leave the band. LeRoi had recently returned to his Los Angeles home to begin an intensive physical rehabilitation program. Tonight, Dave told a story about LeRoi at a bar in Virginia where the cash register was near the stage and LeRoi leaned on the register because "standing had become a chore". LeRoi proceeded to play the most beautiful version of Somewhere Over the Rainbow. Dave said, "that was the day I fell in love with him. Three singles from the album were released: The Album was nominated for two Grammy Awards: Best Rock Album and Album of the Year. During the awards telecast, the band played "You and Me" with accompaniment by live singers, percussionists, a string section, and an eight-piece horn section made up of teenagers from the Grammy Jazz Ensemble. Dave Matthews Band Caravan marked the 20th Anniversary of the Band, and in March DMB announced that they would not tour in 2000, for the first time in 20 years. On January 19, 2000, the band announced on their website: While we are still taking the year off from touring, we have decided to plan four multi-day, multi-artist music events that will take place this summer. We will be sending out save the date emails and announcing more information soon but we wanted to share the news with our fans first. The Dave Matthews Band Caravan was largely successful. The short, show tour saw the live return of many fan favorite songs. The unreleased song "Joyride" and hit single " American Baby " from Stand Up were also played for the first time since This was the first officially announced tour date for the band in On February 14, DMB announced the dates for a summer tour. The album debuted at 1 on the Billboard , their sixth consecutive studio album to do so. Following the successful release of Away from the World, the band kicked off their 15 show, Winter Tour with a two-night show in East Rutherford, New Jersey on November 30 and December 1, The show that took place on November 30, featured the band playing every song off Away from the World. This marks the first time that the band has played an album in its entirety at a single show. They concluded the tour at the Wells Fargo Center in Philadelphia on December 22, where he still played 6 songs from his new album, Away From the World. The Summer Tour saw the highest number of different songs played out of any DMB tours in the history of the band. The record will be produced by Rob Cavallo. He stated that he would be fine and would be ready for the coming tour. The shorter acoustic set is played before the longer electric set. The acoustic set features the band in numerous different arrangements. The tour also includes a stop in Poland, marking the first time the band has played there. Although, in January , an e-mail was sent out announcing that Dave and Tim Reynolds would be touring in the Summer months of On May 18, , the band announced that Tinsley had been fired from the band in response to a lawsuit filed by former Crystal Garden band member James Frost-Winn alleging sexual misconduct by Tinsley. It is also their seventh consecutive album to achieve the 1 spot on the Billboard

Instead of simply recording himself with a guitar, he opted to bring in some instrumental help to give his musical ideas more depth. Dave found assistance in drummer Carter Beauford and saxophonist LeRoi Moore, who were both accomplished jazz musicians in the local Charlottesville music scene. Completing the band was keyboard player Peter Griesar, who left the band after a couple of years, as well as the talented and classically trained violinist, Boyd Tinsley. The first official gig for the newly conceived Dave Matthews Band was May 11, 1994, at a private party held on the rooftop of the pink warehouse on South Street in downtown Charlottesville. Clubs started to fill up, tours began to cover more territory, and the fan base grew at an incredible rate. The album debuted on College charts as the highest independent entry, and went on to be certified gold by the RIAA -- a significant accomplishment for an independent album. Meanwhile, the band kept touring and its fan base continued to grow. By allowing fans to tape shows for their personal use, DMB created a highly interactive community that continues in spirit today. The tour lasted well over a year and included sold out theater dates across the country, a trip to Europe, and two summers playing on the main stage of the H. By the fall of 1995, when the band returned to the studio to record its next album, Under The Table and Dreaming had been certified four times platinum by the RIAA. The band continued with a steady schedule of touring throughout 1996, headlining sold-out amphitheater dates across North America. DMB, though elevated to the level of national pop stardom, continued to do things precisely as it had from day one: Without any marketing or promotion, Live at Red Rocks debuted at number three on the Billboard chart and was instantly certified platinum. The album provided fans with a high quality and reasonably priced alternative to the over-priced, ill produced, and illegal live DMB CDs that were beginning to flood the bootleg black-market. DMB spent the following year and a half on the road, selling out stadiums, arenas, and amphitheaters across the country. Tim Reynolds was a guest guitarist on all of the Dave Matthews Band albums, and toured with the band as a guest musician. As with Live at Red Rocks, the success of this second live album was based solely on word-of-mouth buzz. The double-disc album was quickly certified double platinum, and the video has sold over a million copies as well. The band spent much of 1997 on tour, finishing as the top-grossing touring band in the U. In the fall, Dave Matthews joined legendary producer Glen Ballard in Los Angeles to fine-tune song arrangements for a new album, and the pair wound up co-writing 12 new songs in a matter of days. Matthews played electric guitar for the first time, and Ballard helped the band focus and tighten their arrangements, resulting in the phenomenal success of Everyday, which has since gone triple platinum. DMB spent the summer of 1998 touring the country and exposing sold-out audiences to songs from Everyday. For the first time, the entire collection of Dave Matthews Band videos the first 12 was presented together, along with director commentary and behind the scenes footage. On October 23, 1998, the band released its fourth live release, Live In Chicago. The band revisited tracks they had previously written and recorded in and collaborated on a couple of new tunes that had debuted in recent months. The resultant creation, Busted Stuff, was made available July 16, 1999. Busted Stuff is a landmark record for DMB; for the first time ever, this album is without any musical guests. A short tour in several US cities in December of 1999 was highlighted by 2 sold out performances at Madison Square Garden. Captured by 30 cameras in High Definition Widescreen video and recorded in stereo and 5. Dave Matthews began a tour in December to promote his album Some Devil. Emmylou Harris and Spyboy were special guests on the tour. The date tour began in Pennsylvania and ended in California in January 2000. Spring of 2000 found DMB at home in their Virginia studio rehearsing for the summer tour and beginning to mold some new tunes for their forthcoming studio album. DMB Live Trax, a highly anticipated series of exclusive live releases, made its debut in the early fall. Dave Matthews Band returned to the studio in the fall of 2000 and continued to shape their next album. In early 2001, Dave Matthews Band launched a website devoted to their new studio album. From the first show of the summer tour in St. The fourth night at Red Rocks was added immediately after Hurricane Katrina struck. The concert, which featured the Neville

Brothers on the bill, was a benefit for the victims of Hurricane Katrina. Everyone from the concessionaires to the City of Denver pitched in and every cent related to the show -- over a million dollars total -- went to relief charities in the Gulf Coast. Monies donated to the Bama Works Village Recovery Fund are going to CARE to help empower local organizations in tsunami-affected areas to lead the economic and social recovery of their communities. In addition to Stand Up, Live Trax 3, 8. Weekend on the Rocks features the highlights of all four nights, 9. The summer tour production was definitely one of the best yet with DMB taking the live experience to a new level. Due to feedback and a high demand from fans, within weeks, the Fenway Park concerts were offered as Live Trax volume 6. In addition to the rush release of the Fenway Park shows, a show from and were pulled out of the vaults based on requests from fans to release older shows in the Live Trax series. By offsetting the CO2 pollution that touring activities such as transporting gear, powering stages and air travel generate, Dave Matthews Band has taken a proactive role in fighting global warming and helping Native America to restore sustainable homeland economies in balance with the Earth. With NativeEnergy, the band ensures that its CO2 offsetting actually contributes directly to the construction of new, Native American and Native Alaskan renewable energy generators whose clean electricity will displace energy that would otherwise have to come from polluting coal-fired plants, reducing CO2 and other pollution on behalf of the band. Dave Matthews Band wants to send thanks to those that have supported their tsunami relief efforts. DMB trekked the globe in with a return trip to Australia as well as a European tour.

Specializing in all things keys, Strong, the newest member of DMB, has been thrown headfirst into the mix. Hey Buddy, thanks for taking the time to chat with us today. Can you tell us a little about your rig? Well, this is my setup for the DMB band. This Rhodes is from Ken Rich out in L. Muse receptor for all my softsynths, mixer, and a couple of backup situations down there. Got my Nord Triple Pedal â€” a volume pedal for my swells and everything. The instrument I play the most is the [ Hammond ] B3. But this is home right here! What was the song you auditioned with? Really nice piano out there for the audition and I played that one song, beautiful, it was over with. In a band like DMB, with a long history of not having a keyboard player in there. How do you find parts, where are you adding your flavor to the songs like that? They all tell me, maybe whirly [Wurlitzer] on this one, B3 and Piano on this one. So, I sort of start from there and venture out, but I lean heavily on Rashawn and Dave as far as textures and tones and sound choices. Do you have a favorite song yet? So those are some of my favorites, but I really like everything that we played. You play off charts or you justâ€¦ BS: Well, I had two weeks of rehearsal, but they started sending me tunes to kind of like learn and listen to probably a month before that. My boy Rashawn is my friend â€” he did an excellent job of preparing me and helping me catch up. I do mine off the little Apple iPad, so yeah, happens like that. How much time do they give you with setlists? The setlist, we usually find out the setlist, an hour before the show? I dig it though, I really, really dig it, I love it! Keeps you on your toes? Oh my god, definitely, definitely man. So what were you doing before this? But I toured with Ariana Grande last year. Before that, I was main keys for Usher for like years â€” I was with him for a long time. I did a bunch of live recordings with different gospel artists. I did some spot dates with Selena Gomez, some spot dates with Camila Cabello. So, I did a lot of touring with them too but that was more like, pre A lot of those gigs were the same show every night. This is a completely different experience every night, because the setlist changes so drastically. So, it feels different, and we all get solos, and get to experiment pretty much however you feel. The closest that would come to it is church. But yeah man, I love that spontaneity and the changes and the offsets. So, I gotta pull it up and try and find it or just wing it.
