Marion Dane Bauer was born on November 20, and brought up in Oglesby, a small prairie town in Northern Illinois. She was educated at LaSalle-Peru-Oglesby Junior College, the University of Missouri and the University of Oklahoma, where she graduated in 1934.

I read this book whenever I want to read a simple page story. I open it up to the first story I see and I read on from there. Having read it so many times, I can usually just read from the middle of the story since I already understand the plot. I have read the whole book ALL the way through only about 3 times. My favorite of the 11 stories is probably the "Marked for Death" story. She has waited years for the trip and now, her father brings an orphan boy on the trip. Another one I enjoyed is "Little Time"- this story is where the dog on the cover came from. Some of the stories are just a little overdone but as far as story quality- some of these short stories should be made into actual page books or something. The quality and structure of the stories allows me to rate this book at 3 stars. It was easy to finish--a quick read. I picked up the book because it has a story by my favorite author, Bruce Coville. Even though it was very short, it formed a lasting impression on me with powerful emotions and I remember it the clearest of the stories. Without spoiling too much, this was done in this story. What could have been clever wordplay if it was slightly less heavy-handed turned out feeling like a cheat. November 4 This book has 11 different mystery stories. One of them which is my favorite is called "Max, the Hand, and Me. One day this family went to the beach together and found a hand laying on the beach. This hand had only one finger which was the pointer. Later on that day the family had been looking at the news paper. It said that a famous country singer was robbed and the person broke into his dressing room and took his foot and hand. The family thought that the hand must have been his so they went to the producers to show them what they had found. I like this book because at times one story would get really boring and pretty soon it would be over but it would have a shocking ending. I also liked this book because you could read different types of short mysteries in just one book! I really like this book and recommend it to people who like to read mysteries! When great young adult authors get together to write a collection of short stories, you end up with a pretty good book. These stories are "Mysterious" meaning odd not so much creepy. Every story has a note from the author following it and then a short description of the author. Two of the notes from the author were much darker than the actual stories. Troddler may have been my favorite short story.

Chapter 2 : Q & A with Marion Dane Bauer: LITTLE DOG, LOST - Annemarie O'Brien

My favorite story was "Dear, Dear Kitty" by Marion Dane Bauer. Even though it was very short, it formed a lasting impression on me with powerful emotions and I remember it the clearest of the stories.

A stray on the streets of the small town of Erthly, little dog Buddy remembers her happy bond with a boy, whose family moved away to a city apartment where there was no room for Buddy. Does he have a dark secret? The town kids want a dog park, and they organize a rally to support their cause, but can Mark confront his mom? Great for sharing with pet lovers. What inspired you to write this story? The idea actually began with the form. I wanted to write a story that would work for younger readers as well as those in the middle grades. I also wanted a way to approach it that would be less limiting in terms of vocabulary and sentence length than the work I had done specifically for younger readers. I wondered if writing in verse would give me the range and flexibility I was looking for. I have always felt. And a dog and a boy and a small town seemed the perfect place to start. I discovered Charles Larue, the old man in the story, along the way. I found Fido as I wrote, too, a wonderful, dog-dominating cat who gives the story a special energy. What was the biggest challenge you had writing your story? How did you overcome it? My first and biggest challenge was to gather my confidence about writing in a form I had never attemptedâ€”or even wanted to attemptâ€”before. Eventually, though, I settled into it, learning to work with rhythm and lyrical language exactly as I do when writing a picture book. In this case a long, long picture book. Once I gathered the confidence I needed, I had more fun with this story than any other I have written. Do any of them feature a key dog character? If so, which ones? What are these stories about? Dogs were important characters in my very first novel, Shelter from the Wind, and a dog is the title character in The Golden Ghost, but my other animal stories are about wild animals, wolves Runt or a bear, A Bear Named Trouble. What kind of story can we expect next from you? Is it about a dog? If so, what is it about? Can you remember the first book that made an impact on you? I remember so many books from my childhood, but animal stories held a special magic for me. Felix Salten, the author of Bambi and Fifteen Rabbits, was my favorite author. I would read his books as fast as I could and then nearly burst into tears when I came to the last page because there was no more to read. I look forward to your next book about a blue-eyed wolf and will certainly invite you back to share more about it when it comes out. Another great story by Marion that everyone should read is Runt. A perfect example and study on how to write plot. For more information about Marion Dane Bauer, please click:
