Windows Update checks for updated drivers and software for your devices and install them automatically. To check that automatic updating is on Swipe in from the right edge of the screen, tap Settings, and then tap Change PC settings. Tap or click Update and recovery, and then tap or click Windows Update. Tap or click Choose how updates get installed. Under Important updates, choose Install updates automatically recommended. Installing drivers yourself If your device came with a disc, it might contain software that installs a driver. Before you install a driver from a disc, check the info that comes with it to be sure it supports your current version of Windows. Driver updates are often available in the support section of their website. Download the latest driver for your device, and follow the installation instructions on the website. You can usually double-tap or double-click the downloaded file to install the driver on your PC. To manually install a driver You must be signed in as an administrator to follow these steps. Swipe in from the right edge of the screen, and then tap Search. Enter Device Manager in the search box, and tap or click Device Manager. In the list of hardware categories, double-tap or double-click the category your device is in and then double-tap or double-click the device you want. For example, to see your video card, tap or click Display adapters, and then double-tap or double-click the video card name. Tap or click the Driver tab, tap or click Update Driver, and then follow the instructions. You might be asked for an admin password or to confirm your choice. A digitally signed driver includes a digital signature, which is an electronic security mark that indicates the publisher of software and whether someone has tampered with it since it was signed. The driver might have been changed to include malware that could harm your PC or steal info. Most manufacturers now digitally sign the drivers they create before releasing them to the public.

Safety and security Crime The Dominican Republic is friendly and welcoming, but has a high crime rate, ranging from opportunistic crime like bag-snatching and pick-pocketing, to violent crime. There have been a number of incidents in Santo Domingo where foreigners have been mugged at gunpoint during the daytime while walking in residential districts. Take particular care in remote areas, especially at night. Use a hotel safe whenever possible. If you lose your passport or it is stolen, get a police report before contacting the British Embassy. Water safety Lifeguards may not be present at swimming pools or on beaches and safety and rescue equipment may not be available. The sea can be dangerous, especially during the hurricane season June-November. Seek local advice about sea conditions and warning systems and follow instructions. If in doubt seek advice from your tour operator. Local travel Taxis are cheap but many are in a state of disrepair. There have been cases of theft from taxis, so keep valuables and cash secure and out of sight. Tourist taxis are safer and more reliable, but also more expensive. Public transport can be unsafe, but private companies operate good bus services between cities. Road travel You can drive using a UK driving licence for visits not exceeding 3 months. For longer visits, you should apply for a local driving licence, for which you will need to present a certified copy of your valid UK licence. To certify your driving licence, you will need to get a copy certified by a UK notary or lawyer. Once this is done, the Legalisation Office in the UK needs to attach an apostille and return to legalised driving licence to you. While some notaries may not be willing to carry out a notarial act without an individual being present, others are, and are also willing to forward applications to the Legalisation Office once they have completed their part. You can find a list of notaries currently authorised to practice on the website of the Faculty Office the regulator of Notaries Public in England and Wales. You should contact notaries directly to check whether you would need to be present when they notarise your driving licence. Although most major roads are reasonably good, general standards of driving are poor. Drivers weave from lane to lane and rarely signal. Drink driving is common. Where possible you should avoid driving outside the main cities at night. Road accidents are frequent, especially during holiday periods like Christmas and Easter. According to the World Health Organisation, over 3, people are killed annually on the roads in the Dominican Republic - approximately 10 times the UK per capita rate. Take extra care on the road between Haiti and the Dominican Republic. There have been armed robberies in the Dominican Republic on roads close to the border with Haiti, including by criminals dressed as police officers. Make sure you have all the correct vehicle documentation and cash to pay exit and entry fees. Long stretches of the route are isolated, and without a mobile phone reception. Aim to complete your entire journey during daylight. Military and police road blocks are common, especially in the areas near the Haitian border. The people manning the road blocks often appear very informal, although the soldiers do wear army uniform and carry weapons. Drivers are sometimes coerced into handing a small amount of money over before being allowed to continue their journey. This is a government dependency with English speaking agents, where there are representatives from all the relevant authorities including the police and insurance companies. If the accident occurs in any other part of the Dominican Republic, you should file a report at the nearest police station. You should call the police, and wait for them to arrive, at the scene of the accident. The US and Netherlands authorities have prohibited their staff from using the airline while safety checks are being carried out. UK government officials have been told to do the same as a precaution. UK government officials are also advised not to use airlines registered in Haiti. Political situation Political demonstrations sometimes occur, although not usually near tourist areas. Avoid getting caught up in demonstrations or large gatherings of people.
