

Chapter 1 : blog.quintoapp.com: Customer reviews: Family Night! (FamilyStories)

*Family Night! (FamilyStories) [Susan Magsamen] on blog.quintoapp.com FREE shipping on qualifying offers. Play is a basic human instinct—right up there with shelter, food, and water.*

Dec 29, at But the truth of the matter is this: So how do you get your kids to not only take part in family nights, but actually look forward to them? By planning fun events that are undeniably worth doing. The right activities, however, can encourage your family to interact with one another more — instead of just with that screen. Make your own movie Help your kids work together to plan out a home movie most smartphones can handle recording video, and there are even apps you can use to edit and make it into a super-cool movie, complete with music. Non-boring board games Board games are another obvious choice, but is there really a substitute for good-natured family competition? Whether you have old board games from your own childhood on hand or have invested in the latest celeb-backed creations, clear off that table, serve snacks and battle your kids for the ultimate championship. Camp out or in Camping is for the hardiest of folks, right? Not necessarily, especially if you just pitch a tent in your backyard — or your living room. Sleeping bags, lanterns, scary stories and all that togetherness will be sure to make your "campout" supreme. With just a few supplies or even a premade craft kit , there are plenty of options for you all to get your art on. Plan a dinner Move over, meatloaf; work with your kids to carefully plan out a special dinner. Pore over family recipes or look up a new one online. Then shop for ingredients and let your kids help you prepare and serve — fancy dishes optional. Set up a taco bar Another dinner winner is setting up a taco bar with all the fixings. This way, everyone gets in on the fun and even the littlest kids can help put their tacos together. The possibilities are endless — and delicious. Build with food This is "playing with your food" with an architectural spin. Take some fruit cubes, a bag of marshmallows and some toothpicks or slender pretzel sticks and try your hand at building with your food. Read a book — yes, really Rather than reading to your kids or everyone reading on their own, turn this into a collaborative out-loud team performance in which everyone takes turns reading a page or passage of a family favorite. Bonus points for whomever does different voices for different characters. Volunteer As a family, choose a local organization and plan a volunteer outing. Look into opportunities around your community — or beyond — and get excited to help a worthy cause. Of course, not all organizations are open at night, but there are plenty that need evening help, such as serving dinner at a soup kitchen or handing out blankets and care packages to folks on the street. Go see some local sports You probably know taking the whole fam to a pro sporting event can get super-expensive. Instead, go small and stay local. Minor-league affiliates of Major League Baseball teams are super-affordable, for example, or you can check out local college or high school sporting events. Dive into a jigsaw puzzle Puzzles can run the gamut from super-hard to super-easy. Bonus points if you set aside a separate table or other space where you can keep it going until the final piece is put into place. Build blanket forts Blanket forts are a classic; they can be super-simple drape a blanket over two chairs and voila , or they can be stunningly complex once you start adding towers and flying blanket buttresses and the like. Have fun as a family; teach your kids about nouns, verbs, adjectives, etc. Turn cardboard boxes into Smaller ones can become cash registers, car garages or dollhouses, and larger ones can become vehicles, stuffed animal enclosures or a playhouse. Encourage your kids to make a poster or choose a song to play to further illustrate their item. Play dress-up Let your kids rifle through your closet maybe hide the fancy fabrics first and choose outfits to try on. Make a cookbook Have every family member choose several of their favorite recipes you often share as a family and write them out or type them up for future reference. Bonus points for pretty cover pages, string binding, etc. Just plain color No matter how old your kids are, chances are they would still enjoy a coloring session — especially if brand-new markers and fancy grown-up coloring books are involved. Pin A version of this article was originally published in October

Chapter 2 : Family Night! (FamilyStories): Susan Magsamen: blog.quintoapp.com: Books

DOWNLOAD PDF FAMILY NIGHT! (FAMILYSTORIES)

Find helpful customer reviews and review ratings for Family Night! (FamilyStories) at blog.quintoapp.com Read honest and unbiased product reviews from our users.

Chapter 3 : Family Movies We Love

Family Night is a full on team practice in Lambeau Field with a game-like atmosphere that includes game-day music, videos and fireworks. It will be broadcast statewide on television as well.

Chapter 4 : Family Craft Night | Chick-fil-A

Need a great pick for your next family movie night? Having trouble finding a movie you can all agree on? Our editors have hand-picked some of the best kids' and family movies available on DVD, including beloved classics, action-packed adventures, laugh-out-loud comedies, and powerful dramas.