Very hot summers, cramped conditions, narrow streets, and lots of old buildings that need protection. The NOFD has their job cut out for them. The current equipment supplier is Pierce which is slowly replacing the older Seagraves. Some of the Seagraves are still out there, but will soon be replaced. The New Orleans FD has a very diverse role to play including marine fire suppression, high rises, residential, chemical facilities, small businesses, as well as heavy industry. A tremendous amount of railroad traffic criss-crosses through the city with two major rail yards located in the city limits. Only a digital print is available of this squad pictured, but a broadside view in photo format is available as well. Click on image for full size view. Back in , the New Orleans Fire Department celebrated years of service. That now makes them years in - congratulations. This decal was applied to the Seagrave engines. Straight stick, L1 is seen here at the New Orleans Superdome parking lot when it was new back in I believe they just retired this engine recently. Luckily I was at the right spot at the right time to catch this beauty away from the house. These large ladder trucks were normally assigned to the downtown area. Equipped with a steerable rear section, these monsters can corner around the very narrow streets of the French Quarter. This is a very classic shot in my opinion. It is typical scene from the New Orleans French Quarter with the second floor balcony having all the ferns and even a banana tree growing on one of the lacework iron railed balconies. Engine 9, a Pierce, is assigned to the "smallest house in the French Quarter, but they take up a whole city block" per the shift on the day I visited. Third District headquarters for the New Orleans Fire Department is located in this modern looking building on Elysian Fields Ave and between I above, and I seen in the background. Mascot for this station is Popeye. Ladder 11 is assigned to the 3rd District headquarters station. City of New Orleans Engine 14 is equipped with a spray nozzle at the end of that movable boom on top of the truck. This type of truck is called a "Squirt" because it squirts water to hard to reach spots during an emergency. The water nozzle on the end of the boom is controlled from the ground. Ladder trucks are equipped with water nozzles as well, but the squirt is not equipped with a ladder or platform for personnel to be lifted on. Only difference in Engine 17 and 40, pictured below, is the placement of the engine number. Engine numbers are normally placed on doors, but in the case of engine 17 the number is on the rear side windows. Still looking pretty good is this Seagrave assigned to the station in the heart Algiers on Homer Ave near the old movie theater. This Seagrave pumper is starting to show some signs of aging. The city of New Orleans will purchase all of one brand of fire apparatus and usually they are purchased within two or three years of each other. The present "perferred supplier" is Pierce at least until a better deal comes along. It is hard to imagine that a huge hook and ladder L6 once was housed at this station. Fox 2 is one of two Oskosh T-6 models assigned to the airport. The airport fire department is part of the New Orleans Fire Department, but is located in Kenner, another city and different parish county. This Oskosh T model "Snozzle" is also equipped with an infrared camera and a thermal vision system. It is one of the latest weapons found at major airports. This is the second one I have found. Note the piercing nozzle on the end of the boom which is used to poke holes into aircraft to apply a water spray. Fox 7, striped with Mardi Gras colors of purple, green and gold is the newest piece assigned to New Orleans International Airport. This engine is assigned to a station house near the French Quarter. The rear box also has lots of walk-in storage space. Can anyone tell me what station this apparatus is assigned to?

From this Cathedral of Saint Louis am happy to greet, in the name of the Most Holy Trinity, the whole Church in New Orleans – all those who make up her membership, all those who work together to fulfill her mission. In particular today I greet all of you, dear priests and religious of Louisiana. Here in this mother Church of the archdiocese, I give thanks and praise to the living God for your lives of dedicated service to Christ and his Church. This temple of God, this house of prayer and gate of heaven stands as the central point of the City of New Orleans, and from this place all distances are measured. Here Christ dwells in your midst, present in word and Sacrament, making this a place of grace and blessing for all the People of God. Here God the Father is adored in spirit and truth, Cfr. And just as this Cathedral of Saint Louis is the focal point of the City of New Orleans, so too Christ is the very center of your lives. Christ is for you "the beginning and the end" Apoc. So closely are you identified with Christ that each of you can say, as did Saint Paul: I still live my human life, but it is a life of faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me". And together with Saint Paul you must proclaim: The Church in Louisiana owes a great debt of gratitude to the many priests and religious who have laboured here from the beginning. That tradition of heroic dedication in proclaiming the Gospel of Christ by word and deed continues today in the service that you render to the People of God. Always remember that the supernatural effectiveness of your service within the Church is linked to the witness of your life lived in union with Christ. You are therefore called to conform your lives more and more to the person and message of Jesus Christ. And never forget that the precise goal of all apostolic service is to lead all people to communion with the Most Holy Trinity. Our lives as Christians find their origin and destiny in the mystery of the Most Holy Trinity, the fundamental mystery of our Christian faith. The Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit exist in an eternal communion of life and love with one another. In the Church we are privileged to participate now and forever in the communion of life and love, which is the mystery of God, One in Three. The Second Vatican Council teaches that "it is from the mission of the Son and the mission of the Holy Spirit that the Church takes her origin, in accordance with the decree of God the Father". And in describing the mission of the Holy Spirit, the Council says: Although the Old Testament contained elements that prepared us for the revelation of Jesus, it did not unveil this profound mystery of God: Only the Son of God made man bears witness to the truth about the Trinity; only he reveals it. The truth about the divine Sonship of Jesus and the Trinitarian mystery of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit are alluded to at the time of the Annunciation, as well as during the baptism of Jesus in the Jordan. Moreover, during his public ministry Jesus speaks about his Father and the Holy Spirit. In the Gospel of John we find many affirmations by Jesus about the intimate union that he shares with the Father. But is during his discourse at the Last Supper that Jesus discloses in a definitive way the truth about the Holy Spirit and the relationship which the Spirit has with the Father and the Son. We can say that throughout his teaching Jesus "has opened up vistas closed to human reason" concerning the life of the One God in the Trinity of divine Persons. When he had completed his Messianic mission and was taking leave of his Apostles on the day of his Ascension, Jesus announced to them: Thus with these last words Jesus solemnly entrusts to them the supreme truth of the undivided Unity of the Most Holy Trinity. Dear brothers and sisters: You joyfully proclaim the Good News of faith, that "God is love" Io. The Father so loved the world that he sent us his only Son, and through his Son he sent the Holy Spirit. Today and each day of our lives we celebrate the love of God the Father for each of us – the love revealed in the Word made flesh and in the gift of the Holy Spirit. Moreover, we proclaim that God sent his only Son into the world not to condemn the world, but that the world might be saved through him.
