Born on September 15, Graduated from the University of Virginia with a law degree in Lieutenant colonel in the Virginia militia. Agent to Great Britain during the Civil War. Member of the Whig political party. Failed to gain British recognition of the Confederacy during his time as an agent. Secured Enfield rifles for the state of North Carolina. Illness prevented Peyton from finishing school at VMI, but he later transferred to the University of Virginia and studied law. This piece was one of many that he produced throughout his lifetime. In the following 10 years, Peyton travelled across Europe due to his involvement in the Millard Fillmore administration. While in Chicago, he met Henrietta Washington and married her in They returned to live on a plantation in the western portion of Augusta County near Staunton. A physical ailment prevented him from joining the Confederate army. Instead, he accepted an appointment from the governor of North Carolina to be an agent to Britain. Two significant works that Peyton produced as a result of his time abroad are The American crisis, or, Pages from the note-book of a state agent during the Civil War and Rambling reminiscences of a residence abroad. John Lewis Peyton succeeded in obtaining firearms, but he and other state agents failed in gaining recognition from the Confederacy. Letters and firearms Letters are the primary source that can be used to determine why John Lewis Peyton went to England and what he accomplished there. Upon arrival in England, Peyton experienced difficulties in his mission. At the period of [his] arrival, there were no arms to be had here. His first few months in the country were spent meeting with Confederate commissioners, British officials, and travelling around the country. It was not until late in that Peyton sealed a deal for the purchase of rifles. However, there were also a number of agents, such as Peyton, who worked backstage in private meetings and rallied support among the British public in order to try to sway the government and the people. Therefore, the Confederacy operated on different levels of diplomacy. The state agents appear to have been more successful in consolidating the support of members of the upper class than in appealing to the general public. This ended up hurting the Confederacy. The agents abroad, both official Confederate commissioners and individual state agents, did not have a great deal of practice in the field of diplomacy. The Confederacy appears to have underestimated the challenge at the beginning of the war when they were confident of victory. Peyton spent the majority of his time abroad in London and among officials, aristocrats, and the wealthy. In his Rambling Reminiscences of a Residence Abroad: England-Guernsey, Peyton devotes a chapter to the discussion of the poorer areas of London. He speaks of the working class sections in derogatory terms. Matthew Poteat, Henry Toole Clark: McFarland, , Louisiana State UP, , Saunders, Otley and Co.
