The depot located there was built in and is the oldest in the state. Major changes have come to the three islands pictured in the Delaware River. In , a pair of American bald eagles was living on the island. Camden, city and t-ship of Gloucester co. The site upon which it stands, was taken up between the years and , in several parcels by Messrs. Cooper, Runyon and Morris. But a small portion only, of this area, is built upon: The district is divided into 3 distinct villages, separated by vacant grounds from half a mile to nearly a mile in extent. It contains 35 dwellings, a store, school house, 2 taverns, a tannery, an extensive smithery and manufactory of steel springs for carriages. The central and largest part of the city was originally called Camden, about the year , when first divided into town lots, by the then proprietor, Jacob Cooper, and is nearly equidistant between the two Points, and opposite to the central part of Philadelphia. At the period of incorporation, , the population of the district was ; in it had increased to , and now, Sept. There are here also several handsome public gardens, much frequented by the Philadelphians, who have ready access to them by the steam ferry boats constantly passing the river [Gordon, pp. Lithograph map, with added color, The county now includes eight townships, colored yellow, pink, orange appears gray , or blue: Washington Township was transferred to Gloucester County in The incorporated city areas of Camden and Gloucester are green. Ironically, in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, the island had a reputation for lawlessness because of the gambling and dueling that took place there. It is now part of Pennsauken Township, which was later formed from parts of Stockton Township.

Europeans settled along the Delaware River, attempting to control the local fur trade. Throughout the 17th century more Europeans arrived in the area, developing it and making improvements. After the restoration period the land was controlled by nobles who served under King Charles II. The growth of the colony was the result of Philadelphia, a Quaker colony directly across from Camden along the Delaware River. In the Ferry systems were established to facilitate trade between Fort Nassau and Philadelphia. The ferry system operated along the east side of the Delaware River. The ferry system built by William Royden was located along Cooper Street and was turned over to Daniel Cooper in Pomona Hall, built in . The initial structures and settlements that formed Camden were largely established by three families: The Coopers, The Kaighns, and the Mickels. The Cooper family had the greatest impact on the formation of Camden. In , Jacob Cooper developed some of the land he had inherited through his family into a "townsite. But that status began to change in the early 19th century. Camden was incorporated as a city on February 13, , from portions of Newton Township, while the area was still part of Gloucester County. The city derives its name from Charles Pratt, 1st Earl Camden. The railroad terminated on the Camden waterfront, and passengers were ferried across the Delaware River to their final Philadelphia destination. The Camden and Amboy Railroad opened in and helped to spur an increase in population and commerce in Camden. Ferry systems allowed Camden to generate business and economic growth. Until , Camden was a part of Gloucester County. He bought a house on Mickle Street in March . Whitman spent the remainder of his life in Camden and died in of a stroke. Whitman was a prominent member of the Camden community at the end of the nineteenth century. In Census takers recorded eighty factories in the city and the number of factories grew to by . Through the Civil War era Camden gained a large immigrant population which formed the base of its industrial workforce. Campbell Soup was also a major employer. In , the first commercial nuclear-powered ship, the NS Savannah, was launched in Camden. In plans for the Delaware River Bridge were enacted as a means to reduce ferry traffic between Camden and Philadelphia. New Jersey and Pennsylvania would each pay half of the final cost for the bridge. The bridge was opened at midnight on July 1, . Thirty years later, in the bridge was renamed to the Benjamin Franklin Bridge. By the mids the city had to pay its workers in scrip because they could not pay them in currency. On June 6, , the city hosted the first drive-in movie. German, British, and Irish immigrants made up the majority of the city at the beginning of the second half of the nineteenth century. By Italian and Eastern European immigrants had become the majority of the population. The different ethnic groups began to form segregated communities within the city and around religious organizations. With this industrial decline came a plummet in population: From to , mayor Randy Primas fought to renew the city economically. Civil unrest and crime[edit] On September 6, , mass murderer Howard Unruh went on a killing spree in his Camden neighborhood killing thirteen people. Unruh, who was convicted and subsequently confined to a state psychiatric facility, died on October 19, . When the officers were not charged, Hispanic residents took to the streets and called for the suspension of those involved. The officers were ultimately charged, but remained on the job and tensions soon flared. On the night of August 19, , riots erupted, and sections of downtown were looted and torched over the next three days. City officials ended up suspending the officers responsible for the death of the motorist, but they were later acquitted by a jury. Rolax alleged his civil rights were violated and sued the state of New Jersey. While these two industries would provide some financial security for the city, the proposals for them did not go over well with residents, who overwhelmingly opposed both the prison and the incinerator. Primas, however, was wholly concerned with the economic benefits: The trash-to-steam incinerator was another proposed industry, also objected to by Camden residents. Once again, Primas " Later, the new high tech buildings would be sold to Martin Marietta. It really is the right ingredient for changing a paradigm which has been a wreck". According to The New York Times, " The Sixers Training Complex includes an office building and a 66,000-square-foot basketball facility with two regulation-size basketball courts , a 2,000-square-foot locker room, and a 7,000-square-foot roof deck. Adjustments to the plans have been made and the project is expected to be completed in 2008, creating up to 100 jobs in the city upon completion. In preparation for the Republican National Convention in Philadelphia, various strip clubs, hotels, and other businesses along Admiral Wilson Boulevard were torn down in 2007, and a park that once existed along the road was replanted. This move was met with some disapproval from residents of both the city and county.

County Wall Map Alexander C. Stansbie, James Keily, and Samuel M. From Original Surveys" Philadelphia: First wall map of Gloucester County. Here, the remnant consists of five townships Deptford, Franklin, Greenwich, Harrison, Woolwich colored in green, yellow, blue, or pink with the Delaware River forming the northern boundary. A statistical table at the top, using data, provides the size in acres, number of taxables and householders, and total paid county and state taxes for each township. Each township averages only about five hundred landowners. An engraving presents a view of Woodbury from across the Woodbury Creek. The town, for a mile in length, and half a mile in breadth, is incorporated, for the maintenance of a fire engine and fire apparatus, for which eight wells have been sunk; and the provisions for defence, against this devastating element, are very efficient. The creek was, 70 years since, stopped up; but the obstruction was removed in, much to the convenience and health of the inhabitants. Vessels now load at the landing, in the town [Gordon, pp. Bold letters name the counties, villages, and towns, as well as the major roads. Some distances along them are given. Much of Deptford Township is shown covered with forest; half of Franklin Township is Pine Barrens note the difference in the symbols used. Near Bridgeport Woolwich Township there is a cranberry marsh and a wooden causeway over wetlands. Built in Philadelphia in, the steamboat serviced the Smyrna Delaware to Philadelphia route. First atlas of Gloucester County. The Salem section of the atlas is described under Salem County. The number of townships has doubled to ten, colored in pink, green, orange appears gray, or yellow: View down 1st Avenue a sidewalk to the tabernacle building "Map of Mantua Township. The circular grounds of the Pitman Grove Camp Meeting are shown at the bottom of the map: Named for Reverend Charles Pitman, the camp was founded in as a place for Methodist ministers and their families to meet in the summer. Eventually, small cottages were built. The district was added to the National Register of Historic Places in The town is still "dry": Glass manufacturing facilities are evident in Glassboro and Malaga. In, the skilled German glassblower Solomon Stanger and his family established a "glass works in the woods" here, where they found a good quality of sand necessary for glass, abundant fuel oak trees to heat the furnaces, and proximity to Philadelphia, their primary market. Malaga is uniquely situated near where Gloucester, Cumberland, and Salem Counties meet. The country around the village is much improved by the use of marl which abounds here, and in some places is found in an indurated state, assuming the character of limestone [Gordon, p.
