Chapter 1 : Books by Diane Wolfe (Author of Lessons from the Samurai)

From the children's How It Happens series, How It Happens at the Firework Factory takes you on an exciting tour where skilled technicians craft fireworks, choreograph a show, and then ignite a fabulous display.

When I started the Making Things Happen Intensive three years ago, I never imagined just how much of a my life would take. Just read my blog from three years ago. You will SEE the change. Some of you have been readers and friends since I first got into weddings almost a decade ago. What a remarkable decade it has been. All I want now is to know God more and more every day. I want to give my all and share my experiences to help others until I have nothing left. I want to give my all without fear. From leaving full-time desk jobs to pursue their passions to finding balance in their lives, witnessing transformation sets my heart on fire! Mind you, the MTH alum have made big things happen because they did the hard work on their own. Nothing magical happens in the workshop. MTH is just the spark that lights the fire. They showed up, dove in and made. You know how important my family is to me. Time with Grace is my number one priority. So, setting out on a 10 city tour this year was a huge decision. And one I have zero regrets or fear about. Oh, yes, I will cry when I leave. It is worth the sacrifice of being away. For me to say that is huge. I hope it shows you just how important this work is to me. This work opens doors, challenges self-imposed limits and makes people make things happen. It brings people together. It makes collaboration happen. It makes creativity happen. It makes balance, peace, friendship, marriage, and life happen. It makes happy happen. And it makes me take big scary life-changing action, too. So many of the MTH alum are now my closest friends. If you want to make things happen, you have to decide to do the work, but there will be a huge community of people doing the same things right along side you. They will cheer you on. They will lift you up. They will remind you why you do what you do when you forget. And you will forget. I do sometimes and there are always friends there to lift me back up. They will text you just to tell you you CAN do it. They will shower you with high fives. They will also offer to shower you with confetti when you do a scary speaking engagement thank you, Michelle Edgemont! The MTH alum are the best encouragers around, hands down! The intensive itself is pretty simple. We spend a day talking in a small group. We talk about our fears, our dreams and how we are going to make them happen. We spend a good hours together, so we really get to know each other. When you spend a day talking about your fears and dreams with someone, it challenges you to take the leap. Whatever that big leap is for you. We hold each other accountable. And the incredible thing for me is that, as I grow, so does the power of the intensive. I know the same is true for Emily , Gina and Natalie as well. We are so grateful! My heart is more focused than ever. Things are at a whole new level. People ask me all the time if we can do an online version of Making Things Happen. You could do it, but there is nothing like feeling the magic of slipping into that gown in person. OK, for the guys or gals, too! Awesome, but not at all the same as being there on the sidelines. You have to sit in the seat and look in the eyes of the person next to you. You have to take a risk and be present. You have to sit in the seat to really harness the change you want in your life. Quite simply, you have to show up. Everyone else is in the exact same boat. We tell people to come in comfy clothes. Leave the decked-out duds at home. MTH is a place to come and just be yourself. Austin, Phoenix, LA, Chicago and one last city yet to be determined. Every intensive except NYC will be by the airport, too, for convenience. Lucky you, if you happen to live in one of these cities! By the way, people are always looking for roommates if you want to share. You might make a friend for life, as I know so many alum have done! We have are so passionate about this work that we have given a lot of partial scholarships in the past. We want people to be able to make things happen, no matter their financial situation. We also have very flexible payment plans. Just email Marissa to get set up with one. We want to make this easy for you. If you think this is right for you, do yourself a huge favor and apply so you can either win a scholarship or get the half-off rate. Save the other half to invest in your business or your family or whatever sets your heart on fire. You will thank yourself. And register before your city sells out. I want you to make things happen with us. I want to get to know you. Because your story will teach me something and I hope mine does the same for you. Want to know more? Read the post that started it all and take The Challenge and read and this and this and this or any of these posts from alum. Ask an alum about their experience. We have had some very generous alumni step forward and donate to a full scholarship fund yet again. Year after year, the generosity of so many amazes all of us! Two ways to enter: Leave a comment here and tell us what you want to make happen. Also, please tell us the city you would like to attend. Leave a comment here telling us what you want to make happen AND spread the word! Tell your friends about Making Things Happen, too! Tweet, Facebook, Blog, Pin this, send smoke signals! whatever you want to do to tell people about Making Things Happen and just link to this post. Leave a separate comment here telling us you did so. We will pick a random winner for this second scholarship, so the more entries you submit, the better! You have until midnight on April 1st to apply. We want you to be able to make this happen no matter what! Today is your day to take the leap, my friend. I have goosebumps typing finishing this post because I am genuinely so excited to read your entries. I never cease to be inspired by what makes people really come alive. So, what do YOU want to make happen?
