She founded and has served as editor since of Conversations on Philanthropy. In this capacity, Ealy has cultivated a robust network of scholars, practitioners and donors paying attention to critical gaps in classical liberal understanding of the nature of liberty and social order and the role of philanthropy and voluntary action in a free society. Ealy is also series co-editor of Polycentricity: Since , Ealy has served as Secretary and Executive Director of The Philadelphia Society , a membership organization founded in that promotes the interchange of ideas in the interest of deepening the intellectual foundations of a free and ordered society. As founder of Thinkitecture, Inc. She also provides philanthropic mentoring services, helping donors evaluate their goals and opportunities for giving and assess efficacy of their philanthropy. Ealy received a Bachelor of Science degree in science education with highest honors from Auburn University in and received the Master of Arts degree in history from the University of Alabama in . In she completed her doctoral degree in the history of early modern moral and political thought at The Johns Hopkins University. Her dissertation, directed by historian J. Pocock , addresses the thought of the seventeenth-century Cambridge Platonist, Ralph Cudworth. What are the social institutions undergirding a free society and how do they evolve? How do individuals inherit, interact with and improve their social institutions and pass their learning into the future? How do philanthropy and voluntary social action promote human flourishing and personal and community resilience? Ealy has special interest in the areas of K and higher education curriculum and policy and in disaster response and recovery. Serving as an affiliated senior scholar with The Mercatus Center at George Mason University, Ealy participated in a five-year project to follow the rebuilding of the Gulf Coast in the wake of the destruction wrought by Hurricane Katrina. In this capacity she has interviewed over one hundred community leaders and residents in New Orleans, Mississippi, and Texas about their experiences in recovering from the disaster. From Ealy served as a founding board member of Project K. Ealy has been a leading advocate for promoting awareness of and preparedness for the needs of children and youth in disasters among civilians, emergency responders, and policy makers. Ealy coordinated volunteer teams to participate in Operation Golden Phoenix in and , successfully injecting scenarios and solutions around the needs of children and youth during these full-scale, multi-sector training exercises.
