"There are a million rules for being a girl. There are a million things you have to do to get through each day. High school has things that can trip you up, ruin you, people say one thing and mean another, and you have to know all the rules, you have to know what you can and can't do."

February 13, at 3: I hate her most for the deny, deny, counter-accuse. Seriously, go eff yourselves. My wife makes me hate humanity. I hate all the people who suggesting talking and conseling. What kind of sissy are you to need to emote your feelings to another person in the first place? I wish I had never met my wife. You make MY whole life miserable! This bitch makes me feel like I am going insane. I want to be left the hell alone most of the time. She would be the one feeling this way and everyting would be my fault. For instance, a few days ago I had stayed up late doing some work at home. She was working an overnight shift, so she was up to. I ended up getting 2 hours of sleep before I had to wake up and get to work in the morning. I was a bit groggy. I know she was up working. But, should it matter? We have the same kind of argument over all sorts of things. Oh, you want to clean, so I need to want to clean right now too? Oh, you want to do activty-X, so I need to do it too? Or, oh you are upset about thing-y, so I need to be equally as upset about it? There was love at some point. Must have been, right? What does one do? It all seems very chicken and egg to me. She wants love or attention or money, so she whines and whines and nags hoping that enough of it will make something happen. She wines and vents with the intent of someone else doing something as the result of it. In turn, I resent her behavior and refuse out of pride and stubbornness to reward her with affection. I feel like how could I act affectionaly towards someone who is constantly being so negative. Negative towards me, towards our kids, towards life in general. We make enough to get by. I want to start my own business. I want to be financially independent. Sometimes I just want out. To be done with it all. I just want you to not be negative towards me. Can you do that for me? Tell me I have some kind of problem or issues or need help. I want to destroy her in those moments. Mostly, I just want her to not be so negative. Watering brown grass can make it greener. Yada, yada, self-help blog post comment BS. Again, she has expressed she feels the same way. In order to take the steps I believe are necessary to bettering yourself and your future I want to be surrounded by positivity. Positive people doing positive things in and around the world I want to be a part of. Thanks for letting me vent. See you next time, maybe.

Chapter 2 : 7 Ways a Wife Injures a Husband – Without Even Knowing It – Ron Edmondson

To avoid the common mistake guys make of sending a girl too many messages, here are a few simple rules for texting girls that will help you text a girl the right amount: When texting a girl, keep the text ratio close to

But, like all great TV shows, the story is really not that simple. And it evolves over time, with each season somehow—and miraculously—managing to top the one before it. Regularly cited as one of the greatest television series of all time Rolling Stone ranked it number three on its list of the best shows, right in between Mad Men and The Wire , here are 25 things you might not have known about Breaking Bad—which is about to get the big-screen treatment , courtesy of creator Vince Gilligan. Like the worst meeting I ever had –! The woman we [were] pitching to could not have been less interested—not even in my story, but about whether I actually lived or died. They were particularly interested in casting either Matthew Broderick or John Cusack in the lead. The network brass watched the episode, and agreed. And I would be a sobbing mess watching week to week on Breaking Bad. Gilligan was glad it worked out the way it did. All of that to say that those last two episodes, because of that, would have been really big episodes, and would have taken the characters into a hugely different realm than that they were already in, and it would have been a hard thing to come back from, coming into season two. To me, the trick is to do as little as possible with the characters, and yet keep them as interesting as possible. And Vince Gilligan did a fantastic job of getting most of the science right. And I am just thrilled with that. I think Vince Gilligan is a genius, and you can quote me on that! I wanted to develop a character. But I did one episode and then I agreed to do two more with the caveat that I wanted to be part of a filmmaking family. Vince told me that I changed the game and raised the bar for the show. And their writing inspired me to think, to create someone who was polite, threatening and poignant. Juxtaposed to Philip Michael [Thomas] and Don [Johnson], who were at times a bit full of themselves but were doing a little bit of acting, Eddie was just doing his job. And I wanted Gus to be in that mode. And then that was augmented by the visual effects work of a guy named Bill Powloski and his crew, who digitally married a three-dimensional sculpture that KNB EFX created with the reality of the film scene. And it took months to do. Which, considering there are 62 episodes, seems a little on the low side. Though Walter White and his family live at Negra Arroyo Lane, the home that you see in exterior shots is actually Piermont Drive NE, a private home in Albuquerque that has become a pretty major tourist attraction. Speaking of that infamous pizza scene: It really was Cranston who threw it, and he managed to do it in one take. A fight scene between Jesse and Tuco Raymond Cruz turned serious when Cruz ended up accidentally knocking Paul unconscious. Raymond just thought I was acting so he continued and kicked me in the side and picked me up over his shoulder and threw me against the house, but in reality I was pretty much unconscious Just another fun day on the set of Breaking Bad! There are a lot of friends on that crew. It was an emotional day to say the least on set—a lot of tears. When asked about whether he had any regrets about the show or any of its storylines, Gilligan admitted to one: There were all the beatings he took, and, of course, he was using meth, which is brutal on your teeth. Warren Buffet was a fan of the series, and even showed up to its fifth season premiere. The 62nd element on the periodic table is Samarium , which is used to treat a range of cancers, including lung cancer. BuzzFeed created a thorough breakdown of some of the most memorable ones. In , a chemistry teacher named William Duncan was arrested for selling meth; in , Irina Kristy , a year-old math professor, was arrested for running a meth lab. Though details are extremely limited at this time, The Albuquerque Journal reported that filming is scheduled to begin very soon. Out of what one can only believe are security measures, the movie is being shot under the working title of Greenbrier and, according to the logline, "tracks the escape of a kidnapped man and his quest for freedom.

Chapter 3 : The rules for texting guys part 1 – Don't make these mistakes! : MasterDater

It's supposed to be a festival of fun, filled with new friends, parties, and a cappella on the quad. But battling everything from homesickness to anxiety and depression can make it anything but.

Learn Now Rules for texting girls – 5 common mistakes When it comes to texting a girl you just met, one tiny mistake can ruin everything. It can be helpful then, to have a set of rules for texting girls that will keep you from slipping up. For some guidance, here are five of the common mistakes guys make when texting girls – and what you can do to avoid them. Giving up too easily on your texts to a girl One mistake guys make when texting girls is giving up too easily. But this is often a big mistake. For instance, she may be busy, in a bad mood, or is simply unsure of how she wants to respond to your text. Give her some time a few days – it can even be weeks and then re-engage the girl with a text. Like all texts, you want the re-engaging text to the girl to be light, fun, and playful. Hey crazy face – are you still alive? Should I send a search party of midget ninjas or minjas as they prefer to be called to come rescue you?! Keeping this light, fun, playful tone in your texts to a girl will get her smiling and put her in a good mood. Texting a girl too much Nothing can kill attraction and ruin your chances of seeing a girl again quite like texting a girl too much. It makes a guy look needy and provides no challenge for the girl which means she may quickly get bored and move on. To avoid the common mistake guys make of sending a girl too many messages, here are a few simple rules for texting girls that will help you text a girl the right amount: When texting a girl, keep the text ratio close to 1: You want to send her about as many texts as she sends you and look to keep them roughly the same length. Cut out needless texts. Let it end with her. Keep an abundance mentality. Over-texting a girl tends to be the result of scarcity and neediness. To avoid this, you want to have an abundance mentality when texting women. Simply imagine that you have a hundred other amazing girls that are actively interested in you. This will help you from getting too hung up on that one girl and prevent you from texting her too much. Trying to have a serious conversation over text is exhausting and nobody likes doing it. When texting a girl, you instead want to focus on having fun and keeping it light. Now, a great way to make sure you keep things light in your texts to girls is by using emoticons. As a result they help you avoid misunderstandings and unnecessary drama. If you want to get out of that mindset for good and become a master at texting girls, then you should be texting lots of women. Texting a lot of women will help that abundance mentality develop naturally. Missing the big picture in your texts to women Sometimes guys forget just why they are texting a girl. They get wrapped up in idle chit chat and completely lose track of the big picture. The big picture, of course, is to get the girl to meet up through text. See, the fun, playful texts like the one mentioned earlier still play a role. Fun texts are key to re-establishing that attraction which will make her want to meet up. But from there, remember that the purpose of your texts to a girl is to keep moving the interaction forward. Therefore, your texts to women should be about building attraction and planning to meet-up. Take the Quiz now Related Posts Brian M - author of posts on The Art of Charm Once he realized attraction was something he could learn, Brian spent way too much of his free time studying and practicing everything he could find on the subject.

Being a girl definitely has its pros and cons. We have the tools to enhance our appearance and trick other people into thinking we are good looking. We have an undeniable power over men that is best described as "having boobs." We get into the bars/clubs for free and rarely need to open our.

However, as my high-school theology teacher, Mr. Never hook up with friends. Hooking up with friends automatically changes the dynamic of the friendship. Friends should stay just that: And if you hook up with all your friends, who will listen to you talk about your hookups? Never hook up with more than two friends from the same social circle. Never hook up with the neighborhood gossip queen or people who are active in the social scene. People who go out a lot will spill your business over a drunken conversation. Save yourself from all the secret pointing and whispering when you walk into the club and opt for a different evening suitor. If neither of you can host, only hook up in five-star hotels. Gay bathhouses are just trashy, and you might run into a gossip queen or a popular scenester if you go, which would be breaking two hookup rules. And you can order room service in the morning -- on him, of course. Momma was so right when she said that if you give the milk away for free, no one will buy the cow. Make him work for it. Never hook up with guys with race-related hangups. This rule is for all my fellow black gay men and other gay men of color. Save your brain cells and the yarns and move on to the next suitor. Listen to your inner SVU detective. Have fun, be yourself, and be safe! Have a laugh, have a shot, and have a happy, safe hookup!

You are not really sure about his intentions or if he is even interested. You feel like you might have messed things up, and all you want to do is get his attention back! I am a guy that wants you to WIN in the relationship game. I apologize in advance for being rough but stick with me! Curb your impatience â€” This is advice I give both men and women in the area of texting. Patience is a hell of a virtue and it shows that you have emotional maturity. To win, you need to show some self-restraint and understand that he may not consider messaging you as important as you do. Rather match his interest, and hold back from texting him! Text back only when he does â€” Ties right into the above, you need to let him take the lead here. You need to set the stage for the type of relationship you would like to have with him later. If you are the one constantly texting him and showing need, this will continue into whatever relationship you create with him. Never chase a guy over text â€” Probably the biggest mistake ladies make not only with texting guys, and also in creating relationships with them. Many women kick and fight against this concept but have you honestly ever had this work out? Have you ever been assertive with a guy and had him reciprocate your interest? The reason why is because this is the MALE role not the female. If you are the one chasing him over text or in person he sits back and lets you do all the work, then he does his best to sleep with you and disappears shortly after. Want to wrap him around your little finger? This is why I wrote the book below, to give you what you want as fast as possible! If you are not getting what you want from him, why not use some killer texting strategies to get into his head and launch the relationship to the next level?? Take a look below, you are only a click away from getting what you want.

Yes, adding some fun emojis is totally fine, but it's not always required to have a really good conversation. So don't feel like you have to add an emoji to every single text. 5.

Being a girl definitely has its pros and cons. We have the tools to enhance our appearance and trick other people into thinking we are good looking. However, being a girl takes a lot of hard work. We are expected to perform the same jobs for less money. These pros and cons are just the tip of the girly iceberg. My fellow females can relate, and men, take notes. We hate getting ready more than you hate waiting for us to get ready. This does not apply to ALL women damn you, naturally beautiful demons but it does apply to most. If you are an average looking human like myself, there are so many steps that must be taken before you can take on the world feeling confident and fully prepared to run into your ex and his new girlfriend. Men usually complain about having to wait around for their girlfriend or wife to get ready, and they should know that we are equally pained over the process. The thing that bothers me the most about getting ready is all the time I have wasted in my life just trying to look presentable. If my hair was naturally straight or wavy instead of a tangled knot from hell, I could have probably solved world hunger by now. Or better yet, I could get an extra hour of sleep per day. The truth about the female obsession with our appearance, aside from societal pressure to look sexually appealing, is that we do it mainly for ourselves and for other females. In order to maintain our appearance, we spend our precious time and money in various salons: Every time I walk into a nail salon, I curse the evil witch who decided women should have their nails painted. And then, there is waxing. This is so fucked. If we put out immediately, we are slutty. Do you want a girl who has standards when it comes to who she sleeps with or a girl who is down to sleep with whoever comes her way? Either one is fine, but make up your minds. We are funnier than society gives us credit for. We live in a culture where it is assumed that men are the funnier gender, and it is simply not true. Most of my friends who make me laugh to the point of tears are girls. I also know many men who are extremely clever and funny as well, my point being that humor is not gender exclusive. It troubles me that people are always shocked when women are funny. We make love a top priority. Girls will do just about anything for love. I believe this is our biggest downfall and also what makes us so brave. There is nothing more courageous than allowing yourself to be vulnerable. Some of the time, this vulnerability blows up in our faces and leaves us broken hearted, but we are always willing to get back on the horse when the next guy comes around—even when that first horse bucked us off into a barbed wire fence. When it comes to love, girls are definitely the more resilient gender. We get hurt time and time again but we never stop hoping that next time will be better. They will use that hurt to fuel a year cycle of emotionally unavailability and destructive behavior. One other downside to this fact is that once your girlfriends do find love, they will most likely fall off the face of the earth. Major shout out to girls who can balance love and friendship, you are the Michael Jordan of sisterhood I think he was like named MVP and he was good at basketball and Space Jam and stuff, you get the point. We constantly have to think about our safety. Girls actually have to plan their activities based around the likelihood of getting abducted, raped or murdered. We know not to walk around town, run errands or take out the trash late at night by ourselves. It sounds extremely paranoid but the casualness of this concept is frightening. This is where it ends. I hope my parents give CNN a flattering photo of me for the news. I hope Nancy Grace says kind words about me. Sometimes we receive special treatment and can get what we want solely because we are women. We get into most bars for free. We can attempt to flirt our way out of a speeding ticket. Bitches love mozzarella sticks. I lose at least 20 strands of hair every time I blow-dry or straighten it. Between my roommate and me, there are legit tumbleweeds of hair currently blowing around my apartment floor. Whether we are crying over skinned knees at 5, dealing with backstabbing friends at 15 or getting our hearts broken at 25, we never stop needing our mom. No one cares about you or understands your problems quite like your mom. I recently called my mom asking how to make scrambled eggs, solidifying the fact that I would actually die without her. If we have a good relationship with our mom, we take her opinion very seriously. Our boobs and backs constantly hurt. Our backs hurt from carrying our boobs around all day and our boobs hurt for no goddamn reason at all. We probably enjoy food more than you. Girls are always being pegged as birdlike eaters, ordering something low in calories like a salad or sushi. The Hunger Games is nothing compared to a table of five hungry girls trying to share nachos or a Dominos pizza. If we are single, we are supposed to feel bad about it. If we are in a relationship, we are persistently asked when we might get married or have babies. The only times I feel bad about being single are when I feel the societal pressure to be in a relationship, when I have to kill a spider or when my groceries are too heavy. When she has a ring on her finger, he popped the question. No irritating questioning necessary. If she is so crazy, why would you date her for so long? What exactly constitutes one as being crazy anyway? Did she slash your tires or did she just express a human feeling? Did she try to burn your house to the ground or simply ask you where the relationship was headed? I have held my feelings back in several relationships in an attempt to not appear crazy, and looking back, I regret it. Girls are quick to turn on each other. Place the blame where it belongs. We are judged based on our appearance. We can barely make it through a day without being sexually harassed. The next man in a coffee shop or grocery store who tells me I should smile, is walking out of there with a broken limb. We are not nearly as complicated as men think we are. Women have earned the reputation of being complicated and in reality, we are simpler than one might realize. We want what everyone wants: We have way more on our minds than pumpkin spice lattes, Ryan Gosling without a shirt on and the Kardashians.

"You made fun of that kid, so I'm going to make fun of you now." "You made fun of that kid, so think of how terrible he must feel." A group of fifth graders is upsetting a first grader by playing "Keep Away" with his backpack.

While the MeToo movement has swept through Hollywood, the adult-film industry has mostly shrugged off allegations of sexual misconduct. The veil of secrecy allows predominantly male executives and producers to stay in positions of power for years even as a never-ending supply of young, inexperienced women enter and exit the industry before anyone even notices. Blighe usually cams alone in her homemade studio. Porn star Nikki Benz, who has been working in the business for 14 years, said authorities doubted her claim that she was sexually assaulted and violently attacked while filming an X-rated scene. How much MeToo is happening there? Blighe said she was not prepared for what happened when she arrived on set to film a scene with Banks – a fellow cam model – and well-known male performer Manuel Ferrara. In one scene, Ferrara puts his hand over her mouth, then grabs her throat. The director of that scene, Jonni Darkko, has shot over XXX-rated movies for Evil Angel, including at least two film series specifically focused on gagging and extreme oral sex. Blighe said Ferrara also bit her shoulder, arms and back, leaving teeth marks and bruises. Ferrara did not respond to repeated requests for comment. In the bathroom after the shoot, Blighe had Banks take pictures of her injuries and they talked about what happened. According to Banks, this was when she realized that Blighe felt violated. Supplied Banks also acknowledged another concern Blighe has raised. According to the women, they spoke with Gentile in advance of filming and were assured that Stagliano would not touch them while he directed the scene. Stagliano touches Banks a few more times during the scene. In the cloistered world of porn, performers tend to watch out for each other and word travels fast when there are problems, Gelbard said. Evil Angel But Banks and Blighe were at a disadvantage. But she continues to tweet about her experience and hopes it will serve as a warning to others thinking of breaking into the business. She has been harassed online and stepped down as chair of the Adult Performer Advocacy Committee on Aug. Ferrara, Gentile, Darkko and Stagliano are all still working. There are no rules.

Being a good girl starts with taking care of your body by eating healthy and going to bed at the same time each night. Take care of your mind too by exploring different hobbies like reading, playing sports, or volunteering.

What do teenage girls need to know to navigate those difficult years? The truth about spots Tell your daughter that spots or blackheads are not caused by these things: Sebum blocks the pores from underneath, and then bacteria or inflammation causes the spot. Good spot creams take a few weeks to work because they stop new ones from forming, so she has to be patient. She should ask her doctor or pharmacist about which ones might work for her. She is supposed to be growing and going up sizes in her teenage years - her skeleton doubles in size during these years, for a start. Frame any comment about bodies in terms of health and what she can do with her body run, play sport, dance, walk up stairs without puffing. Tell her sizes are all mixed up depending on the brand. Talk with your girl about things she can say when somebody comments on her body shape and size, or is mean and insulting to her. Girls who filled in the survey for my book, Girl Stuff, told me they could remember, even years later, the comment that set them on the road to an eating disorder. Alcohol should be taken seriously New research shows that girls who are given alcohol before the age of 18 by their parents are more likely to develop a drinking problem. Explain to her that alcohol has a stronger effect on the teenage brain because her brain is still forming properly. If you possibly can, make sure you pick up your daughter from parties and other events so you can assess her state. I consulted a few experts about the ways families can keep up communication, and there are also some useful websites. Teens can try sites such as divorceaid. Parents can get help from caffcass. Reassure her that she can always "go backwards". There are lots of things she can do and say to make herself feel better about this. Make her understand that she still gets to say no to everything she wants to even though she may have said yes in the past, or have been pressured into something. Be aware that if your teenager is going out with an older partner, the older he is, the more likely he will want sex, expect sex, and even have picked up a sexually transmitted infection. Some parents will immediately forbid contact, while others will urge the use of condoms. One product in the USA is aimed at to year-olds. You can let her know that even though people talk about it, only a minority of girls and women remove all their pubic hair. Some of the possible problems she can expect to get if she does remove her pubic hair include: This could be environmental or political, or something to work towards as a gap year later on. Tell her life is all about choices and changes. There are smart ways to stay safe When you talk to her about safety - on the computer, on the street, on public transport or out and about at parties or clubs - frame it in a way that praises her for being smart enough to outwit potential dangers and problems. Role play will help her know what to say or do in real situations. Sometimes girls will put themselves in danger rather than risk embarrassment - offer to be the "bad guy", and have a code. You can be the "mean parent" who insists it was your idea, and she gets to save face. What other information is crucial for surviving the teenage years?
