By Mike on In light of recent events in the world, earthquakes and revolutions, I have been contemplating the matter of presenting this topic quite extensively. There are a number of avenues to use in bringing this truth to the forefront so I may take several of them or come back later with more thoughts about it. I want to make one thing clear from the very start of this post: I do not believe that the events that have occurred in Japan and New Zealand through natural events and the Middle East through social events are the result of God judging the people in these regions. God has made the ultimate judgment and laid it upon Jesus for all of humanity. Please grow up in Christ and keep your mouth shut until you do. I was in a prayer meeting mere hours before the earthquake hit Japan and not one of us were led by the Spirit to intercede on behalf of the people. There was not any burden on my part during the remaining hours of the night either. When I awoke Friday morning and witnessed through televised reports of the destruction and impending tsunami that was posed to hit the West Coast of the US, I asked the Father why we had not been used to in some capacity to shield Japan through our prayers. I must admit that I did not get an immediate response to that prayer, yet have kept bringing it up in the days that have followed. During that interval I have heard from number of those that believe as I do, as well as those that seem to have their heads. We that call ourselves sons of the Most High are in birthing mode now on this earth and until we are fully developed the earth will shake with great pain waiting for not only our divine delivery but liberty from the bondage that it is held in. The kingdom on this earth will be as the kingdom in heaven where grace is enthroned. Judgment is not made from this throne, only grace flows from it to all that are in the kingdom. Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need. Which one will you get when you go before it? It depends on the manner in which you approach it. When man fell, his first response to God was for mercy not grace. It was grace that he fell from. Mercy is the expression of grace that permits access to the throne while in a fallen state. Salvation restored our nature of grace in the kingdom. If a saved person approaches the throne of grace asking for mercy they are out of order. People of grace approach grace for grace that abounds. The Greek syntax of this sentence clearly demonstrates this too. This is important since needs are only overcome by the abounding nature of grace not by the expression of mercy. I realize that that statement will throw many of you into a tailspin, but let me explain it with an illustration. Since the object of the game is to garner as many properties as possible in order to receive monies from the other players landing in jail can cost you by letting the other players advance ahead of you and acquiring these higher priced properties. Those cards guarantee that you do not miss a turn, and if you have one in the opening moments of the game, it can place you into a prime position to acquire the higher priced properties ahead of the other players. So how does this illustration apply to needs being overcome by grace and not the expression of mercy? It only works if you have it and present it at the time of the offense. But how would grace work in this example? That is what kids know instinctively about grace! Jesus loved playing Monopoly with us! Judge not, and ye shall not be judged: What Jesus asks of us is not humanly possible. How, you may ask. The distinguishing characteristic of grace is reciprocal giving, correct? Yet there is one more thing that I want to ask you: If you are a grace-gift sent from the Father, can you judge? How does a gift judge who is worthy to receive it? When you give a gift to someone, do you do it out of love for them, or for what they did in order to receive the reward gift? So how do you take this entire lesson and apply it to the people of Japan as a son of God? Some of you may be led to go and help them personally while others may try to assemble resources to aid the victims. There are those that will be led to pray for them. Let Holy Spirit direct you. As for myself right now I will offer this prayer for them. Father, as a son washed in the blood of Jesus I come to the throne of your grace and ask for mercy for the people of Japan that they may find your plan and purpose for them in this matter. I ask that the healing spirit come upon those that are hurting both in their bodies and in their minds and bring them into the wholeness that you have always intended for them. I decree that what has been intended for their demise will be the foundation of new prosperity in their communities. I thank you Father for hearing the prayers from those that are wondering where you are in all of this and that Jesus is invading their lives with new hopes and desires enabling restoration. I decree that the resources of the kingdom of Heaven will manifest in the lives of all of these people to enable them to rise from the ashes and become a light on a hill. I decree and declare that you are a very present help in their time of need and that you are ever present to hear their pleas and that your arms are not too short to provide help to them. Thank you Jesus that your church is working diligently to provide for those that need the resources of the kingdom to overcome the daily shortages in food, water, shelter and any other item that is lacking for them. Father, I ask that you would send the heavenly host to assist those that are trapped in the debris so that they may be reunited with their families as a testimony to your love. I decree that the life which is in the kingdom will be made manifest in the lives of these people to you glory, Father. Holy Spirit I thank you that in all the confusion and chaos that swirls about these people that you are there comforting them and directing them in the path that they should take towards the restoration of their lives. I thank you Father that you have heard my prayer, and the prayers of those around the world who have interceded on behalf of these people and have granted our requests for the advancement of your kingdom on this earth which will abound with great thanks from all the people. Father, let grace and peace rule in Japan. Amen Grace does not judge â€” it has already been judged and all favor has been awarded to it. That is your heritage as a son of God. It is time to walk accordingly â€” the earth, your place of dominion, expects it.

Kingdom, Grace, Judgment Quotes (showing of 53) "The Gospel of grace must not be turned into a bait-and-switch offer. It is not one of those airline supersavers in which you read of a $ fare to Orlando only to find, when you try to buy a ticket, that the six seats per flight at that price are all taken and that the trip will now.

The theologian, writer and Episcopal clergyman Robert Farrar Capon has been retired for over ten years at this point, during which time he has become an influential figure for many of us. In other words, he is a model for much of what we would like Mockingbird to be, and a major inspiration. His esteem for the Bible is as obvious as it is infectious, his grasp of the Gospel nothing short of heaven-sent, yet his tone is utterly grounded in the very real troubles of you and me. Capon has written commentaries , memoirs , works of theology , novels , even cookbooks – all of which we would highly recommend. Recently Father Capon granted Mockingbird a short personal interview. We are grateful and honored that he gave us this rare opportunity to pick his brain: The message of the cross, of death and resurrection, meets with so much resistance, from both inside and outside the Church not to mention within each and every one of us. Do you have any fresh thoughts on how to connect this Word with suffering and conflicted people? Turn the question around – “The message is for suffering and conflicted people. Christ on the cross meets us in our suffering and conflicts not in the promise to take them away. He is simply with us in all our times. Many of us are young, and in the midst of raising small children. Needless to say, we could use some encouragement about how to integrate your message with parenting. Look at God the Father and how he loves us all as His children. How do you think He parents you and then do likewise. As both a writer of fiction and a lover of theology, what works of fiction novels, plays, films have you found most formative, inspiring or just plain indispensable? Do you have any reading recommendations for us? The Greek New Testament is the only indispensable book I have read. For entertainment and pleasure I have enjoyed all of C. Lewis and Charles Williams and T. Julian of Norwich most definitely and some modern books The Shack and the Joshua series. My wife Valerie and I once ran a film discussion course at St. Over the course of a year, the group watched the films together and then we discussed them. The idea was always to look for the Christ figure around which the whole story depended. We also watched non-gospel films. It was lots of fun and the discussions were stimulating and illuminating. What do you consider to be your most important or lasting work? Were you surprised by the response to any particular project? My most important book is Between Noon and Three. It took 10 years, 25 rejections and 7 revisions before it got published. It seems to have made a huge mark from what I have heard from many people. The first time it was published they dropped the last third of the book in which I deal with the eschatology. The latest version has kept the original book as I wrote it. I would also put my Parable books [collected in the volume Kingdom, Grace, Judgment] at the top of the list as well. They seem to be used a lot by the clergy and lay people love the take on the parables. Looking back at a life of ordained ministry, what encouragement do you have to those in the Church? Especially those who are disheartened by the lack of grace? We are surrounded by grace, the lack is in us. Our inability to be still and know God is our major stumbling block. Do you have any recent thoughts that have emerged that could be encouraging to us? When you keep Jesus as the ground of your being and the center of your life, retirement is no different from an active work life. Jesus is my Saviour, my Friend, and my Lover. I pray as constantly as is possible, I translate from the Greek daily as Valerie and I celebrate Holy Eucharist and I will continue thus in His glorious and loving holding of me till we meet face to face. For part two, go here. Capon on youtube, from a retreat he ran in after the release of his book Genesis: Lots of great soundbites to be had:

KINGDOM, GRACE, JUDGMENT - Paradox, Outrage, and Vindication in the Parables of Jesus. By Robert Farrar Capon. Grand Rapids, Wm. Eerdmans Pub.,

Please support the mission of the Dominican Friars. By Robert Farrar Capon. All preachers must come to terms with the parables of Jesus. Whether one be a pulpit preacher or simply a devout bible reader, the characters in the parables dance across the imagination bearing the truth about the Kingdom of God. Needless to say, analyses and commentaries abound and a preacher looking for help or a fresh look at an old and ever new wisdom can find that abundance bewildering. I just happened across this volume and Jude Siciliano was willing to let me review it! Actually, it is a compilation of three books written by Robert Farrar Capon, an Episcopalian priest, who has a number of other books to his credit. My reading of this three-in-one compilation has left me with mixed feelings about his approach, but I admit to being often entertained by Fr. I think there are two ways one may approach this book. One may simply use it as a reference and come to it for insight about a particular parable or group of parables. He does have his own particular approach, which the title of the volume reveals. Thus, the "parables of the Kingdom" appear early on and the "parables of Judgment" come at the end. Capon also has a frame of reference for his interpretation which he refers to as "right handed power" and "left handed power. It is clear that Capon believes God operates more in a left-handed way and that this is the way the parables should be interpreted. He also has a thoroughly evangelical theological frame of reference that overlays the approach. This, of course, is good theology but I get the impression from the books that the parables have nothing to say to us about everyday living and moral decision making. By the very nature of their craft, theologians are dedicated to making things philosophically tidy. But you must watch them like a hawk, because they can twist almost any two facts, however incompatible, into a thread "and with that thread, they can weave wonderfully. Even if I am good, I am no better than the rest of my fellow workers on the theological loom. Always feel the goods: He is not shy about displaying his love for the Greek text since Greek words appear where one would wonder why THIS particular word needs to be displayed in Greek? There is a large question in my mind about the hermeneutical context. I see no reference to the Middle Eastern character of the parables. Capon comes close to doing that but he makes a good case for his approach and does it in a witty and direct even if a bit pedantic way. This three-book compilation can serve to remind all preachers about getting too "comfortable" with our understanding of Jesus parables!
