This story contains adult themed graphical descriptions that a small number of readers might find offensive, including sexual acts and suggestive themes. Her heart started to hammer through her chest and although she had promised herself earlier that she would no longer cry, she knew she would not be able to hold it for long. She began to breath at a quickened pace and sweat began to break through her brow. Everything seemed to move slower and she was at a loss. A single tear raced down from her left eye. Without thinking, she brushed it off with her palm. Once she reached the middle of the aisle, she became aware of the entire gathering staring at her. Ashley had earlier commented how stunning she looked with the dress and, like all women who ventured out dressed to impress, Laila had already prepared for the stares she would be gathering throughout the wedding because she knew that Ashley was right. However she felt right now, she looked beautiful in that dress. But with the entire assembly looking at her, Laila felt like she would crumble anytime soon. Then she noticed Eric walking towards her, smiling. He was not supposed to do this. Have you been crying? The bride would soon follow. I have to get out of the way. Civil War Edit As a supporter of Ulfric Stormcloak and his rebellion , if she is removed from her position, she is exiled along with the rest of her family from Riften. She is then replaced by Maven Black-Briar , an affluent Nord noble who controls most aspects of the city even before her reign as Jarl. Laila can then be found at the Palace of the Kings in Windhelm. There, she laments on how she failed the people of Riften. Dialogue Edit "What can I do for you? How can they continue to lead their already meager lives with dark clouds looming overhead? My heart goes out to them. If only our coffers were deeper, I could protect them as they were my own family. Many have died taking up arms for his cause. I fear that the land will be stained with blood for years to come. Between you and I, I think his motivations are a bit more self-serving. He uses this holy war as leverage in order to pursue the throne. When the smoke cleared, the White-Gold Concordat was signed One of the terms of the treaty was the outlawing of worship to Talos. To the Stormcloaks, this was viewed as the moment when the Empire became unworthy of the allegiance of any true Nord. Here, this is the key to the warehouse. See if you can drop in on this dealer of poison and convince him to close down his operation permanently. Well, if you change your mind, come see me again. Sarthis Idren has been taken care of. Did you recover anything else from the warehouse worth mentioning? The source of the poison must be destroyed once and for all, otherwise another dealer will simply take his place. Report back to me when your task is complete. If you change your mind, let me know. The Cragslane operation has been stopped. Your continued efforts have been of great benefit to the people of Riften. Allow me to present you with this compensation for your selfless efforts. A vampire has infiltrated your court. My guards will not interfere with you carrying out my justice. That unpleasantness at Helgen supposedly involved a dragon. It killed several soldiers before it departed. What do you know of this? That will be all. I will pass the good news on to her. I hear people have entered this place and have gone missing. Do you know of this? One can only imagine the sordid types he may be conspiring with to bring about your downfall. Do you understand me? Always a pleasure to receive you. What can I help you with today? I wanted to discuss the protection of my shipments. An entire caravan shipment of your mead taken by Imperial soldiers. We lost three soldiers in that attack. A sad day for Riften. To be brief, I need compensation for the lost shipment. Since Riften was responsible for it, Riften should pay for it. Prepare an escort please. Are you willing to take that risk? I may need to throw out the components and start again. The stresses of all this research Has he been possessed? Come, there is much to be done. And we still could be. Evidenced by the men and women who fought and died bravely today. You could see that if you had any faith left in that black heart of yours. May it burn down around you. Pack your things and go. This is all wrong. Jarl Black-Briar put your government together. Do it now, or there will be rioting in the streets. We must move quickly to prevent further violence. I must admit, I do like the sound of that. I have it under control. We will soon begin publicly executing captured men. That should send a clear message to the people. Something on your mind? She will compare the Dragonborn to Mjoll the Lioness.

For the love of the gods, die! Running towards a nearby tower, the Dragonborn meets up with Ralof and Ulfric, who also managed to escape and are hiding in the tower with several other Stormcloak survivors. What is that thing? Could the legends be true? With me, up the tower! Ralof will instruct the Dragonborn to jump out of the tower from the hole into a nearby inn, with the promise that he will meet the Dragonborn when he can. Jump through the roof and keep going! After the Dragonborn runs into the street, an Imperial soldier, Hadvar , will tell the Dragonborn to follow him to safety. Keep close to me if you want to stay that way. Gunnar, take care of the boy. I have to find General Tullius and join their defense. Hadvar will then lead the Dragonborn to the Helgen Keep. Out of my way! I hope that dragon takes you all to Sovngarde. Come on, into the keep! The choice will create some minor changes in the story during the Civil War questline; however, this does not affect the side that can be taken in the war later in the game. If Ralof is followed, he will say, "Through here. We need to get inside! Just before entering the keep, Alduin will say, "Hin sil fen nahkip bahloki. Helgen Keep The only main difference at the beginning of the game between following Ralof and following Hadvar is that if Hadvar is followed, the Dragonborn gets light armor, but if Ralof is followed, the Dragonborn gets heavy armor which is separately obtainable later , but can then double back to where he would have entered the keep with Hadvar to acquire light armor as well. While it is being equipped, Ralof examines the doors. Once they open the door, they must be killed in order to recover the key to the other gate from their bodies. The newly opened path leads to a store room, with two more Imperial soldiers gathering supplies. After defeating the soldiers, Ralof advises the Dragonborn to go through the barrels to find potions. A search will find a barrel with potions , a magicka potion over near the table with bread, tankards, and a potion of minor healing. Between the barrel of potions and the cabinet, there is a crate containing five rock warbler eggs , which can be used in Alchemy. Continuing down, a battle between an Imperial torturer and his assistant against two Stormcloaks is discovered. If either Stormcloak survives the combat, the following conversation will be heard: See if you can get it open with some picks. Along with this, he has 25 and two potions of minor magicka. Next to him are a few septims and a Sparks spell tome. The rest of the locked cells can be picked for lockpicking experience. In the armory there are two lockpicks, an iron shield , and an iron mace and a couple of books. On a table outside the cage is a knapsack containing four lockpicks and some gold. Next to it are The Book of the Dragonborn and an iron dagger. The torturer who was killed also has a steel dagger , the only one in the keep. Beyond is a hallway lined with cells. One of these cells contains a skeleton, bone meal , and a coin purse. After that, a room is entered with prisoners in cages. All of them are deceased, and there are three more skeletons, all of which also carry bone meal, or on rare occasions, may be empty. They may have gold on them as well. In one of the cages, there is a dead Stormcloak wearing ragged robes. Eventually, a natural cave is entered, filled with soldiers guarding it for General Tullius. There are few Imperial soldiers in the cavern, along with another soldier wearing Imperial Armor. The archers all are positioned dangerously close to a pool of flammable oil, which can be set on fire using the Flames spell. After killing them, any surviving Stormcloak Soldiers will stay behind, waiting for Ulfric Stormcloak, wishing Ralof and the Dragonborn good luck and asking that Talos guide them to safety. Next is a drawbridge that connects to another part of the cave that is not occupied by the Imperials. Shortly after arriving in this cave, Alduin will roar, destroying the bridge behind the Dragonborn. When following Ralof, there is a skeleton near the passage leading towards the cavern that leads to frostbite spiders. Near the skeleton is an iron dagger, a potion of minor healing, and a coin purse. The next cavern consists of two to four of the smaller variety of frostbite spiders, plus two larger ones not to be mistaken for giant frostbite spiders that will drop down from the ceiling. Frostbite venom can be collected from their corpses. There are also Spider Eggs in the egg sacks and skeever tails in the hanging web sacks, as well as some gold or a lockpick or two in the hanging desiccate corpse. Once the spiders are defeated, the Dragonborn and Ralof exit through another passageway. In the next cave, a potion of health is at the fire at the other side of the water. There is also another iron dagger. After getting the potion, Ralof tells the Dragonborn to stop at the cart, as there is a bear on the other side. He suggests sneaking by, but he also gives the Dragonborn a Long Bow and twelve iron arrows. In the cart next to the Dragonborn are two bottles of Alto wine and a coin purse. In front of the cart, near the skeleton, is an iron helmet and a bottle of Black-Briar Mead. Beyond the bear is an exit to the cave. Upon exiting, Alduin can be seen flying overhead, departing for parts unknown following his ravaging of Helgen. Ralof will direct the Dragonborn to his sister, Gerdur, who lives in Riverwood. At this point the Dragonborn can choose to follow Ralof to Riverwood, or split up and find their own way. If the Dragonborn decides to split up, unique dialogue can be missed.
