

Chapter 1 : ALFA Management Consultancy

Management consulting is the practice of helping organizations to improve their performance, operating primarily through the analysis of existing organizational problems and the development of plans for improvement.

It may also help if you have a degree relevant to the industry in which you wish to work, e. Some commercial experience may also help your application. In particular, the Masters in Business Administration MBA is valued by some employers but it is by no means essential. Having a Masters or PhD may allow you to enter the profession at a higher level. Search for MBA courses. Many consultants enter the profession with a background of commercial experience and in some cases a professional qualification relevant to a certain industry. However some firms, particularly the larger ones, do take on new graduates for entrance to their training schemes. Competition is extremely intense with high entry standards and requirements. Some consultancy firms have several rounds of interviews and assessment centres that candidates must go through. If you wish to get into consultancy work immediately after university you should start applying for positions at the beginning of your final year and try to establish some relevant experience. Demonstrate to employers your commitment to the profession by gaining membership of the Institute of Consulting CMI. Keeping up to date with industry news through organisations such as the Management Consultancies Association MCA will also help to strengthen your applications. Skills the ability to work as part of a team interpersonal and communication skills, both oral and written creativity and innovation problem-solving and strategic planning ability analytical skills the ability to cope with pressure and challenges commercial awareness and understanding of business environments. As well as part-time or voluntary work, this could include extracurricular activities such as club membership, team sports, or society work that involves team building skills, business or finance knowledge and organisation skills. Employers Management consultancy firms are the main employers. These can be divided into the following areas: They offer a range of services from strategy consulting and human resources, to IT and outsourcing on a global basis. Strategy consultants offer strategic advice to companies on a project-by-project basis e. Human resource consultants offer specialist HR advice, e. Information technology consultancy firms offer specialist IT advice such as defining information needs, systems analysis and design, as well as applications consulting. Financial consultants offer specialist advice including the installation of budgetary control systems, profit planning and capital and revenue budgeting. Outsourcing consultancies manage the outsourcing of projects such as IT, finance and HR. Niche firms are often set up by consultants leaving the larger firms to set up their own consultancies in a particular sector or specialist service. Consultants operate across a whole range of industries and sectors, including:
