Birding is growing in popularity and many people choose to embark on group trips in order to learn about the world of birding, or simply to have the companionship of other people involved in the hobby. There's no doubt that birding is a peaceful hobby, but it's also exciting and often awe-inspiring.

Safety Is Bird Watching Safe? However, if your idea of birding means walking in the woods, there are some safety tips and guidelines worth following. Bird With A Friend Any activity that involves the possibility of injury or of getting lost benefits by having a companion- and birding is no exception. Looking up into the trees, or gazing through scopes and binoculars, set the stage for increased risk or tripping, falling, and twisting ankles. Also, having an extra set of eyes helps to watch for the desired wildlife say, birds and butterflies as well as the undesired wildlife such as bears and snakes. Still prefer to go solo? Always leave a detailed explanation of where you plan to explore, and what time you expect to be back. Experts advise carrying a loud whistle as well. The sound of a whistle may deflect advances from dangerous wildlife, as well as alert others close by that you need assistance. Hunters and campers frequent these spaces as well. Sometimes wildlife viewing may conflict with hunting activities. Be safe and respectful when sharing the woods. You have a bird ID book. Also, be sure to bird watch on public land to avoid trespassing. Trespassing may just be about ownership rights, but there is always the possibility that hazardous materials may be another reason for keeping the public out of some spaces. Watch For Dangerous Wildlife Honestly, people can be more dangerous than what you may find in the woods. However, there are a few things to watch for. Bears and snakes are primary concerns. Most bears merely avoid humans, but should you see a bear, experts advise moving away from it while making noise- such as singing or yelling. This generally avoids interaction with bears. Be sure to wear sturdy hiking boots or shoes, as most snake bites happen on the feet and ankles. Always look carefully before sitting down or placing hands near the ground. Snakes On The Trail: Lyme disease is a nasty infection, and hikers should always tuck in pant legs and douse with insecticide. Mosquitos and black flies can make your hike unpleasant as well, and mosquitos can spread disease.

Chapter 2 : Birdwatching - Simple English Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

These are few things that give me happiness and make me cheer often, the bird watching is something indeed and among the many birds that visit my home or the open ground in opposition to my home.

Birdwatching hobby Birdwatching or birding means going outside to enjoy watching birds. It is a popular hobby. Someone who does this is called a birdwatcher or birder. Both birdwatchers and birders are usually amateurs. The scientific study of birds is called ornithology. People who study birds as a profession are called ornithologists. Birdwatching or birding is very popular in countries such as Britain and the United States. It can be especially awarding in spring when a lot of birds are singing and building nests to raise their young. In spring and autumn many birds can be seen as they migrate. In winter some other kinds of birds may be visiting from colder areas such as the Arctic where there is no food in the winter. Contents Equipment Edit A pelican flying moves steadily enough for it to be followed with a pair of binoculars It is useful to have a good pair of binoculars to help to see birds that are far away more clearly. Scopes or telescopes can also be used. These give much greater magnification than binoculars making the birds look much bigger , but they need to put on a tripod because they cannot be held steady by hand. They are useful for looking at birds that stay in one place for some time such as ducks swimming on a lake, but no use for birds flying in the air or hopping quickly from one tree to another. Some birders like to take photographs of birds. This is difficult to do well unless one has good, expensive cameras and long lenses. Telescopes can be attached to cameras. This is called digiscoping. Twitchers keep lists of all the birds they have seen, and if they hear that a rare bird has been seen somewhere, they travel long distances to try to see it so that they can add it to their list. Birdwatchers are useful Edit Although birdwatchers are amateurs, they can be very useful, because they can tell organizations such as the British Trust for Ornithology about what they have seen. This information can be useful when discussions take place about possible damage to the environment , e. It can help us to protect the birds, because we understand their needs. Some birders help with bird ringing. Birders can also take part in bird counts. By comparing the results with other years this helps us to see which birds are surviving well, and which ones are becoming less common. Code of behaviour Edit Birders are always reminded how important it is not to disturb the birds. This is particularly important in the nesting season. If birds are nesting on the ground in fields or reedbeds one should never go anywhere near them. Some birds get used to humans being near, but others may be very shy of humans. Some national organizations which are concerned with birds include: In the United Kingdom:

Bird watching is one of the fastest-growing hobbies in our nation. Fifty million Americans actually go to the fuss and bother of planning trips to watch wild birds each year, rather than just looking out the window.

Quite large in size for a monocular Could be lighter Choosing the Right Bird Watching Monocular Bird watchers of all skill levels know the right tools are an essential part of birding. If you spot a fellow birder out in the field, he or she will likely be toting binoculars and a field guide. Read on to find out everything there is to know about the wonderful world of monoculars, and which type is right for you. Types of Monoculars There are two main types of monoculars: Both types have their own unique inner geometry, as well as benefits and drawbacks. Monoculars and binoculars with porro prism are thinner at one end of the barrel and grow larger towards the opposite end. Light travels through only four reflections inside the prisms, allowing for a vibrant view. Ideal for the budget birder, porro prism monoculars are typically much more affordable than their roof prism competitors. Porro prism monoculars are not as durable as the roof prism type. It is much more difficult to keep them adjusted. Additionally, many of these monoculars are not waterproof. Roof Prism This type of monocular has straight barrels and typically has a better quality of build. The light must make its way through six reflections inside the prisms, so some light is lost. Roof prism monoculars are generally more compact and lighter weight, and waterproofing is an easier process. These monoculars tend to be more expensive, and they lose more light because of their additional reflections. Magnification When scoping out monoculars, take notice of the magnification options. The power typically ranges from 5x to 10x. You can choose between a fixed zoom or variable zoom. Higher magnification makes for clearer images while limiting field of view. Lower magnification expands the field of view while sacrificing close-up details. This is important to consider when choosing a monocular for birding. The higher the exit pupil, the easier it is to keep your eye on an image. Focal Features Be sure to shop for a monocular with your preferred features in mind. Many monoculars are waterproof, while some are not. Decide if you are keen to have a rubberized body or coated lens. For bird watching, close-up views are often a priority. Consider all of these factors before making a purchase. I recommend 10x or 12x magnification for the best birding experience. Portability Bird watching is often a day long adventure, and heavy equipment can take away from the experience. Durability When picking out a monocular, check out user reviews. Your ultimate choice should be a monocular that will last regardless of weather conditions. Look for models that are waterproof, fogproof, dustproof and shock resistant. Conclusion The tips above can be applied to binoculars, as well as monoculars. Do your research and test out various options in person, if possible.

Chapter 4 : How do you say "My hobby is bird watching" in Korean?

The best thing about bird watching is that you do not have to spend a lot of money order to pursue this hobby. At the most, you would have to just spend $ in order to get proper bird watching binoculars.

Bird Watching 50 million birders must be on to something. I need a hobby. I need something to keep me busy that I look forward to doing – you know, the kind of stuff the experts say keeps your mind from turning to mush. One more along the lines of, say, tying my shoes than mountain climbing. Which is when it hit me: I already have such a hobby. Birds, sometimes, that make noise. If I just paid a little more attention and learned to tell them apart, that would count as a hobby. Why, just yesterday I had a yellow-bellied sapsucker at the feeder. Of course, if I went to cocktail parties, that could be my hobby. Getty Images Filling your birdhouse with food on a routine basis is key to making sure the birds come back. Bird watching is one of the fastest-growing hobbies in our nation. Fifty million Americans actually go to the fuss and bother of planning trips to watch wild birds each year, rather than just looking out the window. There is, indeed, an app for that. While the purists of the birding world bicker over whether using bird-watching apps is kosher the American Birding Association is revising its code of ethics to sort matters out, you can be busy downloading one to help take your pursuit to the next level. Merlin Bird ID free for iPhone and Android is even better; it asks five quick questions about your feathered friend Where are you? What time did you see your bird? How big was it? What colors was it? What was it doing? There are only squirrel-challenging feeders, with varying degrees of difficulty. If the prospect of luring small rodents to your yard revolts you, you may have to take up quilting instead. What you put in your feeder matters less than putting it there. I get a great mix of visitors simply by providing sunflower seeds – every day. Consistency is what matters to the birds. Birds like a drink with their meals. I just keep on refilling the water bowl I still have out back even though our dog died 10 years ago. This has the added benefit of discouraging burglars. You can use plants to attract more birds. Be prepared to fall in love. So hop to it, already!

Chapter 5 : Short Essay on My Hobby (Words)

The Bottom Line On Bird Watching. Bird watching is a hobby that any person can get involved in. Birding can be done in the backyard, in local woods, and parks. Some birders take bird watching vacations and tours all over the world. Connecting with nature is a proven way to relax and reduce stress.

I am going to tell you how my bird watching hobby started. I was a person who would never wake up early except when absolutely required. This meant that on weekends and holidays I would sleep more and wake up as late as possible. It just so happened that on a Friday I was very tired and so I slept early. Next morning at 5: I was feeling fully rested and fresh since I slept very well. I saw that it was still twilight outside. Then, I heard lots of chirping noises and I got curious. I wanted to see what was happening more closely, so I quietly rushed through my morning routine. Then, I quickly changed my clothes and stepped outside. The bird noises were even louder. It was nothing like I had ever experienced outside my home. I could feel the cool fresh air that was hitting my face. It was not too cold, just pleasantly cold, like the air in an air conditioned room. I could see the dew drops on leaves and on the grass. Walk outside Other than the bird sounds, there were no other sounds. No one else was around. There were no vehicles on any of the nearby roads. I walked a bit toward the trees and got closer to the birds. There were a bunch of sparrows on several trees, chirping and flying around. It was the most active group of sparrows I had ever seen. In front of that house, there was a huge section of flower plants. It was a delight to see the red colored Petunia, the towering yellow Sunflowers, the bright orange Cosmos, the white Cosmos and the white Lilies. Suddenly I noticed something hovering on one of the Petunia flowers. I realized it was some sort of bird. It had a beautiful red colored neck. Shortly after that, the hummingbird flew away. This was my first sighting of a wild hummingbird. Something blue I kept walking, taking a fresh breath with each step. After walking for some time, I saw a blue colored object in the trees. Upon taking a closer look it turned out to be a bird. I had never seen a blue bird near my home and I could not believe my eyes. Going back home I walked around for some more time and then returned home. When I returned home everyone else was still sleeping. So I spent some time preparing a surprise breakfast for everyone. No one had noticed that I had stepped out and were surprised to know about the hummingbird and the blue bird. This is the day I decided to continue bird watching. Who can do it? Almost anyone can do bird watching. The only requirement is that you have to be able to go outside and walk around. Also, this is something one can do alone or with a group of people. What equipment is needed to start bird watching? To start bird watching no special equipment is needed. If you have a pair of old binoculars take them along. If you do not have them that is fine as well. You can take a small notebook, to note down what you saw. Why I go bird watching and why should you? I like bird watching because it gives me an opportunity and reason to go outside and enjoy nature. After all, it is better than sitting inside and watching television. It also gives me some exercise. I read that going out and walking is much better than running few miles on a treadmill. Another reason is that I can do this with a group of other birders or just go alone by myself, either one works. Plus my family likes it when they get a surprise breakfast prepared by me! When is the best season to go bird watching? In my experience spring and early summer is the best time to go bird watching. This is the time when many birds build their nests, lay eggs, and feed their young. So, birds are most active during this time and it is a great time to go bird watching. Some birds migrate in the fall, so that is another time to go bird watching. If you do not have cold winters, then you can go see local birds anytime. What time of the day is best to go bird watching? In my experience if you are going around in your local area then early morning is the best time. This is when most birds come out or are more visible. Once they start seeing people they tend to fly away to areas where people do not visit. Another time is late evening, this is when some bird will fly back to their home area. How did you get started? Let me know in comments below â€”.

Chapter 7 : Bird watching as a Hobby. Why is bird watching so interesting?

Bird-watching first became popular in Great Britain, with the United States not far behind. Eventually, it became almost equally popular in Scandinavia, the Netherlands, Germany, Switzerland, and the older countries of the British Commonwealth.

My Views Reflection of my thoughts and imagination.. I like everything that is pretty and nice. My view is Smile In a pleasant morning. Looking up at the sky, watching the birds fly about, The beauty of their forms, the immaculate color of their feathers, the buoyancy of their flight and the sweetness of their song their happy-go-lucky attitude kind of flights, their joy of freedom as they move in a heavenly manner from the earth to the sky, is so fascinating that many spend hours doing just are all a treat and I find inspiring and exhilarating. Taking a moment to watch their antics and admire their beauty. These are few things that give me happiness and make me cheer often, the bird watching is something indeed and among the many birds that visit my home or the open ground in opposition to my home. Some times while walking I found few birds in my complex lawn. I always keep food for the birds in my balcony. A wonderful variety of birds come to eat. Always I like Birds for their vibrant colours and for their cheerful attitude. While seeing birds I remember few lines of a poem by Dr. So I am not meant for crawling, because I have wings. I fly, I fly, and I fly. One of the more fascinating things about finches is their seeming endless variety. They range from very delicate to very hardy birds, in all colours of the rainbow. As observing birds for past few years Many species you can distinguish the gender of the bird just by looking at it. These birds size, colour, beak, feather are not similar; even their call, behaviour, foraging and resting place is also different. Thoroughly observe the common birds found in your immediate locality for their structure, and behaviour. Within few days beginner will be able to differentiate one bird from another by identification factors like how the bird flies, where it is found, what is its shape and size of the beak, tarsus etc. Best time to watch bird is early-morning. After nights rest, birds will emerge looking for energy-giving food. They will be more active and vocal, so easier to spot. Or in the evening while going to nest. Nature has specially bestowed on birds the heavenly voice that fills her garden with sweet melody. Many birds have very distinctive songs and identification is possible without ever actually seeing them. Learn to recognise birds by sound as well as sight. Some birds are far easier to hear than to see, while many others first draw attention to themselves by their songs and calls The birds present can be noticed by their distinct noise produced by their overall chattering and chirping sound; go on the ground or on low branches for forage while one of them perches to high branches as sent in. Out of the window there are a lot of birds seen around in our building. The trees around provide shelter or food or observation points or all for different bird species. Listening to the chirping of birds and spotting them in the bushes from there my focus shifted to not just admiring these avian delights to capturing them between frames. They arrive as a group of six or seven, kept squeaking and foraging by tiny flights. Birds in my Balcony: I have always loved birds especially little Sparrows. I love the way they hop around on their delicate feet, not even walking but jumping from spot to spot. Every morning, I have started to keep food for the birds in my balcony. Immediately other sparrows appeared too in the house balcony making strong sound of twitter it was twittering music to my ears! Pigeons and Doves Pigeons and doves have three song types, one used as an advertising song, the perch-coo, one at the nest site, the nest-coo, and one used in display to a mate or interloper, the bow-coo. Depending on the species, the three coo types may be all different, or a single coo type may serve more than one function. In the Mourning Dove, the perch-coo and bow-coo are the same, and in the Rock Pigeon the perch-coo and the nest-coo are the same. Mourning Doves make a whistling noise when flushed or, as in this case, sometimes during short flights. Two flushed birds, one took off without whistling, the second with whistling. Another crested favourite is the Redwhiskered Bulbul. I love his birdcall He is a very common bird in Indian gardens but a very welcome one, if only for his cheerful call and perky looks. One day I heard a little song outside my window.. It was from a bulbul The bulbul was sitting on my balcony window. The little bird instantly came down from the window and came inside my Hall. It flew down to the floor and then up It makes a few rounds in and out of the house. I was so excited to watch their activity which was a rare sight! I was quite delighted.

Daily morning by 7. The parakeets in my balcony and they are very comfortable with our family presence and enjoy the photo shoot. The budgie parakeet is a beautiful bird with a wonderful personality. It stayed in my balcony for more than an hour. Feel excited to see this new bird in my home! It gave nice pose. I had no time to go for the camera so kept clicking with my mobile. They are known to be extremely ferocious to fellow birds who try to come enter their areas! A White Throated Kingfisher, I am finding this pair almost everyday. This bird is about the size of myna, brilliant turquoise blue above, with deep chocolate brown head neck and under parts. A conspicuous white shirt front and long, heavy, pointed red beak confirm its identity. I watched it opposite to my complex in an open space always sometimes I watch it from my kitchen window. The Greater Coucal, called a Crow Pheasant, is neither a crow nor a pheasant, but belongs to the cuckoo family. Ergets above the tree I saw while walking and clicked it from my mobile. Black Kites I see them all the time, soaring above the trees, their screech audible. I saw it landing on compound wall I clicked from distance in my mobile. I saw Birds in my complex lawn: The Black Drongo is another of our common birds and also one of our most vigilant. I love their quick swooping flights Common Myna Usually in pairs If you open the window to get in some fresh air and then you hear the chirping of little birds. How melodious it is to hear! I generally enjoy observing these birds just love that; listening birds-make different sounds, colourful flowers,. Everything has its beauty:

Chapter 8 : My Views: Bird Watching As My Hobby!

Looking to learn more about our fine feathered friends in the sky? Birdwatching continues to grow in popularity among folks of all ages. The hobby—otherwise known as birding—is an excellent way to enjoy nature and become acquainted with all things winged (well, not including the Pegasus or the Hippogriff).

We wish we had time to wander outside and enjoy the beauty of nature. Birding offers an opportunity to do just this. These are just a few of the reasons people give when asked why they love birding. And there are many, many more. This guide will cover some of the basics, such as: But first, more on why people love birding and why you should consider adding it to your growing list of hobbies. Some people are drawn to the beauty of birds. They love the variety of songs. Others like the companionship that naturally comes along with birding. Birding is growing in popularity and many people choose to embark on group trips in order to learn about the world of birding, or simply to have the companionship of other people involved in the hobby. This is one of the great things about the hobby. All you really need is a good pair of binoculars, a notebook to track your birds, and a field guide. Notebook- This is where you keep track of the birds you see and make notes about the hobby. You can buy a specialty-made birding notebook, or purchase a cheap one. It all depends on personal preference. Browse through guides at your local bookshop to see what appeals most to you and read through it before you go birding. Keep in mind that the larger view may also mean less powerful binoculars, so consider what matters to you and make the purchase that feels right to you. You can get 7x, 10x, or 8x and 8. Head – The head is extremely important when it comes to identification. For some birds, eye color is an extremely important mark for identification. Outerwing – The outerwing is comprised of primary feathers, primary coverts, and the alula. The primary feathers attach to the outermost bones of the wing. The primary coverts are the small feathers atop flight feathers and the alula feathers overlap the primary coverts. Innerwing – The innerwing refers to the part between the bend of the wing and the body. Underwing – The underwing is only visible when a bird is either perched and stretching, or flying. When identifying, remember that a single wing has two sides, often with different colors and patterns. Upperparts – This is the upper body of the bird. Underparts- This part of the bird is important in identification and is made up of a variety of parts—chin, throat, sides, breast, belly, flanks, and undertail coverts. Legs and Feet – Legs and feet on a bird can vary greatly. Leg length can vary greatly and is sometimes an overlooked identifying mark. Tail – You can often find important identifying marks on the tail. Learn to listen – Sound is an important part of birding. This can help to tune your ear to the sounds of the birds before you venture outside. Pay attention to behavior – Is the bird flapping constantly, or is it running and hopping around on the ground? The main idea here is to think of yourself as a sleuth whose job it is to solve a mystery. Some people prefer group birding because they like the social aspect and enjoy learning from more experienced birding enthusiasts. You can check with your local Audubon Society or your local park for birding groups near you, or you can always look online. Attract birds – If you want birds to come to your house, spend some time building a bird house or planting flowers that will attract them. While some people love going out of their homes to bird watch, others love it when the birds come to them. The American Birding Association has a list of guidelines to follow, but the basics are the same for nearly every bird watcher out there. One of the most important things to remember is to respect the birds. You will also want to respect the land. Birding is a great hobby for people of all ages, so have fun learning about this exciting new world. Links American Birding Association – Join the ABA or just browse their site for relevant birding information Audubon – Audubon is an awesome place to learn about birding or search for local chapters, nature outings, and educational seminars Birding – Great resource for all sorts of information about birdwatching.

Bird watching is often a day long adventure, and heavy equipment can take away from the experience. Opt for a monocular that's lightweight and can easily be carried in your pocket or bag. If it's weighing you down, you'll be less likely to use it.

Read this short essay on My Hobby! Through the course of our lives, we bide our time doing particular tasks that may either help us to earn our living or build the staircases to our futures and careers. However, amidst these compulsory tasks, most of us also do things which we enjoy doing. Hobbies are activities which help us escape the daily grind of life and work and give us pleasure and peace of mind. Because we are not being ordered to perform certain jobs which we may not be fond of, hobbies help to inculcate an appreciation for work rather than driving us away from it. The interesting thing about hobbies is that they dramatically improve our own personalities and character traits, therefore improving our performances better on the whole. They help us discover talents and abilities which we may never have known ourselves to possess also giving us an insight of all the elements around us, making us learn new things each day. For instance, hobbies like stamp collecting, bird watching, photography, sports and music make our time worthwhile and give us information about different things. My hobby is gardening. The joy of witnessing blooming flowers and leaves fills my heart with a sense of achievement and realizing the fact that the work of my own hands is bearing fruit definitely gives me pleasure. Gardening also helps to keep me fit, strong and healthy for working away in my garden results in the beneficial kind of exercise that is good for both mind and body. I inherited the love for gardening from my mother and now with her help and interest; I have prepared a small garden in front of our porch. It is a thing of beauty with a grassy carpet and trimmed hedges. I grow several varieties of plants including the China rose, jasmines, ferns and gladioli in my garden. The recently purchased Christmas tree is a welcome addition too. Every day after school it is my habit to check on my garden and look after the plants. The garden has to be kept under a strict check, mowed punctually as the grass grows at a speedy rate during the rainy season, and cleaned at least twice a week. However, during autumn due to the shedding of the leaves, I have to clean it daily while always adding manure and plant medicine for the protection of these wonderful creations of God. A little bouquet of pretty flowers also makes a wonderful gift for birthdays and anniversaries. I am also thinking of including vegetables in my garden for it will save us the purchase of vegetables from the market and we may also sell them to other people at respectable sums of money. It is possible to grow the vegetables that are consumed daily and do not take up much space. It is always a great feeling to have my garden admired and appreciated by other people and it helps me feel like I have accomplished a great goal.
