And there are even more plans in the works, the idea of which is pretty exciting. As you can imagine, there was a lot going on then, and the initial response to BEAR basically blew up their lives, in a good way. We wanted to do our own thing and we got all this crazy press. It was my menu, completely. It was our idea about what the cocktails and the drinks should be. You just remember the good times. She told me the story behind it: To me, still to this day, when looking for other places you just have to have the right feeling about a space, it has to have the right vibe about it. We believed that people would come here because of that. My parents were here to help look for a spot—and literally, when we arrived the sky opened up and the sun was shining. We drove all the way up Vernon to see what was there—we looked at some places and then drove by this place; it felt so right, and that was pretty much it. We liked that the space was in an established but growing neighborhood, lots of people moving in, lots of development. BEAR One of the strengths of this space was that it was already built out, with a bar and furniture. One of the things we decided to scratch off our business plan was going to a space that was already there because that would give us a platform to do the culinary aspect that we wanted—the bar, the drinks, the feeling, the vibe, the atmosphere. They created elaborate preparations that involved luxury ingredients like duck and caviar. The menu changed often, sometimes every week. Later, the vibe became more casual and leisurely, though duck and caviar were still on the menu. Then coming back with these new friends for brunch. Over the next few months we transformed to a more casual, beautiful environment, with an atmosphere and style of service where you can come in with your flip flops after hanging at Socrates Park and have scallops and caviar at the same time. Natasha loved making converts of her guests when it came to things like beets and mushrooms. This made me happy because I love to cook that kind of food. We did this big event at Lincoln Center and cooked for thousands of people. Alpine ski racer and Olympian Picabo Street hung out with me, and there were a bunch of other athletes. It was so surreal. And all they wanted to do was eat Russian food! I loved the personal connections I would make at the table with the people. Their online and cafe sales are already in the works—as we mentioned, they are at Chateau le Woof, selling their dishes through Caviar, and will be starting with Amazon in July or August. They are also on the lookout for a new physical location for BEAR v. We personally welcome our BEAR followers, customers, and friends. Whatever sacrifices came by having this restaurant, I still feel like it was the opportunity of a lifetime.

Get this from a library! Natasha and the bear. [Paula Franklin; N A Ustinov] -- Held captive in the woods by a bear, a young Russian girl cleverly finds a way to return safely home to her grandparents.

Why did you decide to open your restaurant in Queens? I have always wanted my own restaurant and I have worked in different restaurants since I was 16 years old. So in I felt it was the time to actually do it and it was a great opportunity to open one in Queens. Astoria is completely changing. How you did decide on the name Bear? There are little wooden statues on I at rest areas all through Pennsylvania. We used to stop there and pet the bear for good luck when we would drive to visit them. When we were deciding on the name two years ago, we were traveling to Ohio and decided these little bear statues always brought us luck. When the show was announced three weeks ago we were booked in, like, the first 20 minutes. People are calling from all over "not just New York but all over the country, booking chef tastings. And I really hope that this will help put Queens on the food map. It is what I have been trying to do ever since we opened. I was one of the first Queens restaurants to be on the heat map an index of hot new restaurants and I was one of the first restaurants to bring fine dining to the neighborhood. What was it like to shoot the program? They have picked out the best chefs in the whole nation, so you are not up against just anybody. You forget that the cameras are there and you just want to make the best dish. Would you do it again? It was a great experience and I would totally do it again. I think there were about 80 and 90 people in the restaurant yesterday for a viewing party , cheering at me and yelling my name. A lot of people from the community stopped by. It was important for them like it was for me to show a restaurant in the community that was doing something different and exciting. They feel like it is a little part of them too.

Plot[edit] Masha is a Russian girl who lives in the forest with her pig, goat, and dog. All the animals in the forest are afraid of her as she is constantly forcing them to play with her. One morning, Masha sees a butterfly and inadvertently follows it inside the home of a bear who has gone fishing. While playing there, she makes a big mess. When the Bear returns, he sees the disaster caused by Masha. The Bear tries to get rid of Masha, but he is unsuccessful, and he and Masha become friends. In each episode of the show, Masha is portrayed as a smart, kind, but mischievous little girl who is exploring the world around her. This leads to many funny and entertaining situations. The kind-hearted Bear is always trying to keep Masha out of trouble, but often ends up the unintended victim of her mischief. The child was so genuine and open that she could easily walk up to a stranger and play chess with him or pick up his flippers and go swimming. However, after a few days, the vacationers began to hide Please help improve this article by adding citations to reliable sources. Unsourced material may be challenged and removed. Then the storyboarding is developed in accordance with the script and, in general, consists of at least slides. After the team finalizes the plot of an episode, the work for the 2D animatic kicks off. At this stage, animators define the duration of each scene in an episode, how characters are placed in it and interact with each other. After this step of the production is finished, the episode is passed for dubbing. Animators manipulate all the movements that happen during the scenes, such as opening doors, taking books from bookshelves, and creating all the bodily movements required to bring the characters to life. Rendering[edit] Rendering brings all the processes together. They create the lighting and weather in the scene as determined by the script. Composing[edit] Composing is the final stage of production, where the composers review all scenes of an episode, checking the color intensities, smoothing the edges of 3D models, and bringing all the components together to form a complete episode. Voice actors[edit] Masha, her cousin and Father Frost are the only characters who speak. The others communicate through pantomime or wordless sounds. For the third season seven years later in , the officials of Animaccord studio confirmed that the new voice of Masha would be 6-year-old Varvara Sarantseva. Mark Kutnevich provides the voice of The Hare. Music[edit] The music for each episode is written by Russian composer Vasiliy Bogatirev. As of October , one copy of the video "Recipe For Disaster" has received over 3. In the first mobile game "Masha and the Bear: Search and Rescue" was published by Apps Ministry. Distribution[edit] Netflix has released 27 of the first 29 episodes in 9 episodes of 3 segments each. Many of the videos were uploaded multiple times on three different YouTube channels " ", "Get Movies" and "Masha and The Bear" so their view counts across up to three channels have been combined. It has been suggested that this section be split out into another article titled List of Masha and the Bear episodes.

Seating for the ceremony will close at 3: The ceremony will begin at 3: We are very excited to see you there! There will be a map and listed directions to guide you. Seeing her all over campus at the weekly Cru meetings, that random Earth Science class that you take for an easy A, and awkwardly saying hi after complaining about the pizza I served her at the dining commons, Natasha Arielle Peat was one of those girls that you tell yourself, "Ha! What do you get when one of your best friends receives a text on Halloween, right before a campus funded Snoop Dogg concert that night? A wife, I guess! All because of a website meltdown, Natasha and Samantha got to hang out with the four losers of Doner Village. Yes, Charles Hanson was friend-zoned Yes, I somehow convinced myself to tell Natasha I liked her and asked her out on a date To my surprise, and most like a miracle by God, she actually decided to take a chance on me! That was something I soon discovered. For our first date, he decided to surprise me. After driving for more than an hour, we found ourselves at the Getty Villa experiencing history, art, architecture, and everything that we love. I love telling this story. Just like any other girl on her first date, I had to use the restroom non-stop. I disappeared for 5 minutes. By the time I was back, I saw him staring at the 12 Labors of Hercules. I asked Charles what he was doing and he said he was memorizing it. To my astonishment, he had all 12 paragraphs memorized! So I decided to go out on a 2nd date with him. We took the telescope out to the mountains and sat in the trunk. When I said I wanted to have a salsa date, he shone his headlights against a rock and so we could see our shadows dancing. We explored Santa Barbara and all its history. He was and still is my best friend and we talked about everything and anything. In 2 years, we graduated from college, we pursued careers, we stressed about life, we dealt with disappointment, anxiety, adulthood. Nonetheless, we learned to trust God in all things. We watched each other fall deeper in our faith with God, and consequently, fell deeper in love with each other. With the help of our wonderful church, we planted ourselves in Ventura County. I knew Charles was the one I wanted to spend the rest of my life with. All he had to do was pop the question The Proposal The question You have to let her know that everything is worth it; the good, the bad, the struggle to sit through the Kardashians even though I now secretly find it entertaining I knew I wanted to marry her, but how do I make her believe it? My mind began to go to work. So I gave myself a few months and decided to plan a weekend trip to Big Bear! Here we are in Big Bear, with fresh snow on the ground, a beautiful clear day, the stage set for us to snowboard at Big Bear Mountain, and Natasha is in bed super under the weather She kept asking, "Do you really want to go snowboarding today, baby? You can still go with the guys! And that day was the only day we could go snowboarding. It happened to be my plan to propose at the top of Big Bear Mountain. I began to think of another way I could pop the question. Fifteen minutes later, Natasha pulled herself together and insisted that we go snowboarding. Even after the many attempts at telling her that she should rest, she still wanted to go. We snowboarded the whole afternoon, with a bit of trouble in the beginning since it was her FIRST time snowboarding. But we got it together. Before I knew it, the sun was setting and I needed to find Jacob. But because Natasha and I were taking our time, we lost Jacob! Then out of nowhere, Jacob and my other friends found us. We quickly make our way back up to the top of the mountain, find a spot off the slopes, and here it was. I found the spot that Natasha and I would become engaged! And boy was it beautiful. The mountain was capped with fresh white snow, the sunset was in the distance, light was bouncing off the other mountains, Jacob was there as that friend you can always count on, and we got to take a gondola back down the mountain as an engaged couple. The rest of the night, and day after, we celebrated and had a great time.
