Rights group gives new day, new hope to deprived slum children By Vision Reporter Added 23rd October

She convinced his father not to waste his money paying school fees for him since he would never amount to anything in life. Edward Iga was denied education because his stepmother saw no need for him to attend school. Until October 31, New Vision will devote space to highlighting the plight of slum dwellers as well as profiling those offering selfless service to improve conditions in these areas. Today, Andrew Masinde brings you the story of how the lives of street children in Kampala have been transformed by Platform for Labour Action Edward Iga was denied education because his stepmother saw no need for him to attend school. While on the streets he survived on money from selling used mineral water bottles he picked from Katwe slum. While looking for bottles one day, he heard what sounded like a rally. PLA is an NGO that protects the rights of vulnerable people in slums and rural areas through economic empowerment and legal aid. They were preaching against child labour. As he listened attentively, a PLA officer approached and asked him if he wanted to go to school and he responded affirmatively. Iga was later enrolled in a vocational school, where he learnt how to make shoes. Today he earns his bread from making shoes. Rescuing child workers PLA was founded in by a group of female activists to advocate for the rights of marginalized employees and fight against unsafe working conditions, inadequate access to healthcare and inadequate social security for disadvantaged persons. To marginalised people, PLA offers legal aid and it also enrolls children rescued from exploitative situations in both vocational and formal schools. During their community empowerment trainings, PLA has identified over 1, child domestic workers and children at risk of becoming domestic workers. As a result, PLA has made great strides in helping a large number of child domestic workers. Over children have been rescued from child labour; of these were in high-risk work environments. Of the child domestic workers who were rescued, 76 were taken back to school, while 55 received kits, which included sewing machines, saws and hammers, to start their own income-generating activities. PLA organises counseling sessions for these children and also trains teachers through their Support Child Right through Education Art and Media where schools are made a conducive place for the children and this is done through teacher to child training. The organisation has helped over 4, children on the streets of Kampala, placing them in vocational schools and all facilitation is provided. Lule says many children of such were trafficked from villages to the city under the guise of getting education. Lule adds that after completion of school, the children are placed in some workplaces and others are given tools that they use to start their own income-generating activities. Samuel Balagadde, 19, was on the streets where he was picked by PLA in and now he is working. Balagadde says he was taken to a vocational school where he trained as a shoe maker and now he rents his own place and other basic needs plans to go for further studies to become a mechanical engineer. Nicholas Kabale, 20, says his parents never took him to school and he went to the streets. In , he was adopted by PLA and now he is in Nile Vocational institute studying electrical installation. Other activities The NGO has also distributed bed sheets and blankets to needy families. PLA also organises annual domestic workers outreach workshops, especially in Kampala. PLA also provides litigation and dispute resolution. A total of cases were amicably resolved and cases were resolved administratively following service of demand notices on the employers. On the other hand, 60 merited conventional litigation and 13 cases were filed by the department in various courts. Our clients are mainly vulnerable and marginalised employees such as construction workers, teachers, fuel pump attendants, casual labourers, market vendors and domestic workers. The legal department has also hosted legal outreach clinics for domestic workers in collaboration with Children of Zion. The organisation has also worked hand-in-hand with the community to produce informative posters to generate increased awareness and to target a wide audience. Under this project, the three groups each identified income-generating activities and women, youth and children were trained on entrepreneurship skills and business management. Rights group gives new day, new hope to deprived slum children.

Chapter 3 : Help Deprived Children, Teaching- Himalaya | New Hope Volunteers

New hope for deprived children / Betty M. Flint. HV C3 F57 Pathways to maturity: insights from a thirty year study of deprived children / Betty M. Flint, Jean G. Partridge, Elizabeth G. Stark.

Street Children Project Palampur, Dharamsala Share your passion with children and make a real difference in the lives of the young Light a brighter path for at-risk children in the Himalayan region of India Live amongst local people in carefully-screened homestays and immerse yourself in the colorful Indian way of life Learn the Hindi language while waking up to breathtaking views of the Himalayan mountains everyday Brighten up the lives of children while enjoying picture-perfect views of the Himalayan mountains! Volunteer in India Himalayan and work with the street children of Palampur and Dharamsala, economically-backward regions of India. Due to the increasing poverty and a lack of education, many unfortunate children are left homeless and in dangerous situations. Many of these children lack basic necessities, much less a chance to receive proper education. New Hope partners up with local schools, after-school programs and NGOs that support these at-risk children and provide them with the basic necessities, companionship and educational facilities and a safe and healthy environment. Be part of this project and give the children the proper childhood that they deserve. At the same time, this is the opportunity for you to be steeped in the unique Indian and Tibetan culture, surrounded by majestic mountainous views. Depending on your individual interests and skills, and on the needs of the local staff, your daily activities involve, but are not limited to: Teaching children Basic English Escorting children to and from school Teaching children about health and personal hygiene Planning and leading activities such as playing games, theatre, panting, singing, playing music, etc. Teaching other subjects such as math and science Working with after-school programs and organizations Teaching computer classes Helping children with their homework and school assignments Being a friend to the children Providing care and companionship Planning creative activities such as drawing, dancing, painting, art classes, etc. Some of these families are still unable to look after their children. As a result, these children are sent to local childcare centers that take over responsibility and care for them. However the number of children continues to rise and the centers lack volunteers. Your role as a volunteer is to aid the centers so that more children can be reached. Your presence will also be a beacon of light for the children, as the chances of the children falling prey to exploitation in the streets are decreased. Give impoverished children the opportunity to live a proper childhood and be the source of motivation and inspiration for the children. Skills and Qualifications There are no specific qualifications needed to volunteer in the Street Children program in India the Himalayan region of India. However, volunteers are expected to be flexible and patient, as well as have much passion and love for children. Volunteers must also have empathy and compassion for the disadvantaged youth and children and be a mentor to them. Project Location Our India volunteer projects in the Himalayan region take place in and around Palampur and Dharamsala, which are surrounded by water and beautiful snow-capped mountains. For outdoor enthusiasts, there are endless outdoor excursions and trails available for volunteers to take part in. The region boasts extreme sports as well, such as paragliding and hang-gliding. In addition, volunteers can enjoy art galleries, tea estates, temples, lush parks, etc. There are numerous chances for volunteers to explore Delhi with their free time and options abound. By enrolling, volunteers are able to immerse in local culture, work to empower and develop poor and needy and travel to fascinating destinations. It is a deeper and more meaningful way to travel.
