Teacher Appreciation Week is coming up the first full week of May. You will be totally prepared with ideas to thank your teachers! A plant makes a great gift, this Di-vine printable is very clever. I am thrilled to be guest posting here today and sharing a quick and inexpensive teacher appreciation gift idea. Before we get started, I wanted to introduce myself just a little bit. I love sharing DIY projects especially ones that can be done with kids , recipes , printables , hair styles and bows for little girls, and more! I would love to have you stop by sometime! We have it pretty easy over at my house. I only have two kids currently in school which means only two teachers to provide gifts for. I wanted to give them something that would be useful to them, but that would also maybe be meaningful. I love creating printables, and thought I would take a quote that I love and turn it into a gift. There are two options for this printable. First, you can print it out and leave it black and white. It is a classic look and it works great! The printable is sized to be 5X7, but you can print it smaller if you just want it to be a tag or a card. All you need to be able to do the foiling is a Minc machine and gold foil. I love having mine and find all kinds of ways to use it! All you have to do is make sure to print the printable out using a toner printer or a laser jet printer something that will print in all black and then run it through the Minc. I like printing on cardstock. Make sure your print it cut to the size you would like, and then put it in a frame and gift it along with a gift card or a favorite treat. If you like this post, you might also love some of these other teacher appreciation printables over on my blog.
