

Chapter 1 : The Division PTS Week 4: Patch Notes, Difficulties & Double XP Weekend / The Division Zone

Novel_R Revive 2 points 3 points 4 points 1 year ago Yeah I was really disappointing hearing and see them talking about the new TA 4 piece talent! That is my primary build.

Lots of players complained that the game became too easy with the latest added changes from week 3, especially the Underground. There are several videos of YouTubers and streamers out here who shared their opinions on this topic and it almost started to get a bit exaggerated at some point. Overall, the discussion highlighted one important thing: Anyway, the developers have listened and changed the group scaling in Underground missions in terms of enemy health and damage and not longer is based on their quantity. For solo players or those who are playing in a smaller group, more enemies in Underground Challenge Mode can be expected than in the past. Such events will probably be hosted from time to time in the future once the new patch is live, like many other games are already doing it to reward their players even more. Get in game, get XP, earn Field Proficiency. Changelog Game changes Gameplay Underground Challenge Mode will now scale to group size in terms of enemy health and damage, but no longer in enemy quantity. This means that when playing solo or in a smaller group, you will face more enemies in Underground Challenge Mode than in the past. To go with this change, chances to drop items from random enemies in Underground have been slightly lowered to ensure that an increase of enemies does not lead to even more loot. Path of the Nomad 2 pieces: Fixed a bug where players were unable to equip sharable mods. Fixed a bug where named bosses respawn time in the Open World was not correctly set to 4 hours. Fixed a bug where characters could be stuck on ladders when jumping on it after sprinting. Fixed a bug where some weapon skins would not be correctly converted to vanity items, and thus be lost. Fixed a bug where Underground Operations may not start correctly when interaction with the train. Skills Fixed several instances of Ballistic Shield becoming unusable for the player. Fixed a bug where First Aid could not be self-cast when the player was about to receive fatal damage. Fixed a bug where Smart Cover would be destroyed by friendly or enemy explosions. Fixed a bug where the Support Station Ammo Cache bonus could be lost if another Support Station with the same mod was destroyed in the vicinity. Fixed a bug where Mobile Cover Blast Shield damage was not calculated correctly and resulted in ridiculous amount of damage.

Gold, Frankincense and Myrrh. My wife and I decided not to buy for one another this Christmas. You see, our upcoming once in a lifetime vacation to Scotland and Ireland is our gift to each other. What a gift it will be to visit these islands in which, according to a recent DNA test, I inherited 70 percent of my chromosomal heritage. As I write these words, it occurs to me that, as a man, Jesus voluntarily surrendered the greatest gift which He would ever be given. For you see, when Christ took on flesh and dwelt among us, walked and talked among us, was hung on a rough-hewn cross, died, and rose from the dead, and ascended into heaven, He would never again reassume the wherewithal to occupy more than one finite space at any given time. Jesus has been taken from you into heaven, but someday he will return from heaven; in the same way in which you saw him go. And that is, in much the same way the God-man surrendered at least two gifts or talents, when He assumed flesh, and dwelled among us, I think sometimes our Lord withdraws a gift or talent with which He has gifted us. For just as Christ experienced seasons during the course of His immortal, and mortal life, as well, we also will experience seasons, and a resulting change in priorities; during the course of the only life, thus far with which we are familiar. Among all the gifts I have ever been afforded this side of heaven, the loss of my parents. My father went on to his reward in , and my mother joined him last year. The loss of my pastoral counseling ministry. Til a decade ago, I regularly sat with cases a week. After I felt compelled to step away from my former church, in favor of another, my caseload diminished to almost zero. And while my tenure of almost twenty-five years has, in recent years, ebbed more than it has flowed, from time to time some random soul still knocks on my office door, and stretches me to offer them wise counsel. He was largely self-taught, and during the course of perhaps twenty years, he produced and often sold some pretty impressive canvasses. I am privileged to have four or five of them hanging on the walls of my home, and have given another two or three to family members and friends. As my father aged, his ability to discern color waned, and he was forced to surrender the talent to which he so often devoted his time and energies. The latest gift and talent God has, apparently called me to surrender seems to be my solo ministry. For when I surrendered the busyness of my former profession, to which I have alluded I began to exercise an altogether unused talent, that of a vocal ministry. At this juncture, it appears our Lord may have called me to surrender this gift to whence it first came. And while my physician has provided me a different medication, it has been inefficient in remedying the issue with which I currently contend. Whether, or not I reassume the vocal ministry which others seem to enjoy more, and I, less is a tale which is yet to be written. All the foregoing to say: After He provided Himself to be the sacrificial offering for sin, He sat down at the right hand of the only God and Potentate in heaven. It has been true in my life. When one season gave way to another, and my counseling ministry waned, not only was I afforded the wherewithal to exercise my vocal talent, but I took up the ministry of mentoring young, and not so young people preparing for life and impact. When we are called to surrender one gift or talent, God in His mercy, and in His time, has a way of replacing it with another talent or gift; for the sole purpose of impacting our fellow human beings, and, in so doing, bringing glory to Himself. Our Lord represents the best model of this concept. Therefore, God exalted Him to the highest place and has given Him the Name that is above every name, that at the Name of Jesus every knee should bow, in heaven and on earth, and under the earth, and every tongue will acknowledge that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God, the Father. And by your will, and for your purposes they were created, and have their being. Perhaps God knew we needed a little practice. You are a chosen people. In one chapter Charmian offers us a poignant look into her relationship with her mother, and relates one especially difficult memory: Sharon had worked so hard. She deserved to play Liesl, not me. I could have saved myself years of guilt if I had discussed it with my sister back then. I should have known that Mom fabricated that story. The older we became, the more we grew outside her sphere, the more she tried to push wedges between us. It was, I suppose, her way of having some control over us. The God of the entire universe has chosen us, has adopted us, and welcomed us into His family! We are, as scripture assures us, His special possessions! Will we continue to believe a lie that others have consciously or unconsciously instilled within us, and which we ascent to on a continual basis? But did you realize that in the heart of God, Himself is a space that only insert your own name can fill. After painting the room it occurred to Sherri to add a ceiling border. Promising she would stop by a local home improvement store on the way home, we parted ways with the expectation of meeting the next day. I came across a few feet of the unused border recently, and smiled. God and Adam almost touching fingertips. I can tell you, it definitely got my attention! Each and every believer has been called to holiness. Each and every believer has been called to fulfill the destiny that God dreamed for him or herâ€ before He made the worlds. While scripture is clear that only the shed blood of Christ is sufficient to save us from the penalty of sin, we have been given the inestimable privilege of â€cooperating with Him.
