Relaxing on the porch Kimba at A Soft Place to Land is hosting a Garden Party today. Of course any party at Kimba's is going to be good, so I'm excited to join the fun.

Up the Ambience Welcome your family and guests onto your porch by paying attention to elements such as lighting and sound. An evening gathering out on the porch will look and feel magical by introducing unique, soft lighting options. Modern exterior lanterns and wall-mounted downlights are an attractive and gentle option. There are also wide ranges of hanging porch lights, party lights and even low-level ground lights that will create the relaxed ambience that a cozy porch space should be aiming for. Source Quiet Time How much time you want to spend in an area undoubtedly depends on how good it makes you feel. Yes, you want it to look great too, but focus on what you want to get out of the porch and go from there. If you want a quiet place for reading or enjoying the cool evening breeze, then set a comfy chair away from the social area. Treat yourself to a footstool and small table to complete your zone of total peace and tranquillity. Surround yourself with tall plants or luxurious drapes for added privacy! Soften up wicker or rattan with large, plump cushions and this way you can incorporate lively splashes of color, too. You want to encourage family and friends to gather here so comfort is key and arranging the furniture in a U-shape will also create a cozy social atmosphere. Source Create a Vibe Music will also add to the laid-back vibe so you could think about installing speakers to give your porch its very own soundtrack. Outdoor speakers can totally transform your porch into one of the most popular areas of the house to hang out in. Think about location and control so you can remain on good terms with your neighbors. Source Invite Nature There is nothing quite as relaxing as surrounding yourself with mother nature - birds singing, breeze blowing - bliss! From introducing a variety of plants to having a zen water fountain feature, there are many top ways to make your porch a haven of peace and nature. Succulents, potted plants, flower boxes and fresh flowers on the table are all easy ways to create that serene atmosphere. For those with environmental concerns, why not source your new porch accessories from second-hand stores or flea markets, where interesting vintage pieces can be picked up at a fraction of the cost! Having a wooden floor is a real bonus as a fresh coat of paint and varnish will leave it looking like a million dollars. Another option to soften a hard floor is to throw down a thick rug which will serve to brighten a dull floor and feel wonderful on your toes! Source Picnic on the Porch To really make your porch a part of family life, why not consider making it a focal point of your dining? Installing a barbecue or a rustic pizza oven will suddenly transform the area into a place where family and friends can come together to enjoy some downtime and delicious food, without the hosts feeling they need to be stuck in the kitchen when entertaining. Source Stay Traditional What could be more traditional than a porch swing? Maybe you already have one that could do with a lick of paint - stick with classic white or add a splash of colour to match your other accessories. Adding loads of oversized cushions will complete the look and the feeling of pure bliss as you watch the world go by. Rocking chairs are also classic porch furniture to add to the timeless appeal of a porch. For all year-round use, installing a ceiling fan will help keep you cool on those sweltering summer days and an outdoor heater could be used in the colder months to get the most out of your porch time. Source Porch Personality Creating a cozy space to call your own is all about putting your mark on it. Hang some favorite art, wind chimes or family photos; put out your favorite scented candles and lay down a special bed for your pet so they can spend time with you on the porch too. Source No More Nosy Neighbors! Adding a lattice panel is a stylish option and over time you can grow creepers to add even more seclusion and privacy. Adding a canopy or a retractable terrace cover will also give you some protection from the sun at the hottest parts of the day, as well as increasing your privacy. This way you can totally relax and not feel on display for any nosy neighbors!

Tucked inside the historic Porter mansion at the corner of Duval and Caroline streets is The Porch, a quaint place that seeks to be near the madness of Duval without actually being a part of it. On any given night, the bar is filled with a mix of cool, artsy locals and the occasional tourist sharing beers with names like Monk in the Trunk and Dead Guy Ale. While the backdrop is bursting with character, the atmosphere is decidedly laid-back -- a place people go to relax and unwind, not to dress up and be seen. Peter and Jamille Cucci. Cucci found the listing for the space on Craigslist. The building, a historic residence built in , boasts authentic Conch architecture including gingerbread, and of course, a porch across the entire front of the building on both floors. Patrons often make their way out to the front porch for people-watching. The wine bar also comes with one additional feature: "The ghost of Dr. Porter likes to hang out in the corner," Shultz said. The list is ever-changing. Frequent patron Shannon Kennedy said her favorite beer is the Sea Dog Blueberry, although the variety of brews available makes it hard to choose just one. "It tastes like raspberry jam," she said. People have started doing things like mixing one draft beer with another to create new drinks. The chocolaty concoction -- surprisingly light in color -- is brewed with Aztec cocoa powder and cocoa nibs, honey, chiles and fragrant tree seeds. Many beers and wines are available for carry-out purchase. Customers also can choose from homemade juices, sodas and tonics. There is even root beer on draft. The trio said it has been overwhelmed by the positive response from the community since opening earlier this summer. Her friend, Amanda Hawthorne, said she liked the change of pace from the rowdier Duval Street bars. Peter also own The Cafe on Southard Street.

Chapter 3 : Top 10 Ways to Create a Relaxing Porch - Reliable Remodeler

If you dream of lounging in a big hammock with a good book on a wide veranda porch surrounded by flowering shrubs on a lazy summer afternoon (but are trapped in the concrete canyons of the city) then this is the calendar for you.

A swing is one of the most wonderful things you can put on a porch. Rocking chairs are pretty great too—but swings can be shared and in a way that makes them more versatile. View in gallery You can definitely find ready-made swings in stores but they rarely look like this and those that do tend to be quite expensive. With the porch swing plans we found on shantychic you can build everything from scratch. In any case, check out the tutorial and make this project your own. This one also comes from shantychic. The design is pretty similar to that of the first project we shared today, with a few exceptions. The wood was painted instead of being stained and the back has a different pattern. You can customize your porch swing with any color you want. We really like the simplicity of this grey tone and the way it combines with those chic accent pillows. According to the porch swing plans from simplydesigning. You could hang this pretty much anywhere you want. The plans are simple. Just take a piece of wood and some rope, drill four holes in the board, one in each corner and then run some rope through them on each side. Make sure the knot is sturdy and secure. Check out the full tutorial for some tips. View in gallery Now this is a porch swing built for comfort. What a great way to repurpose old furniture into new and creative pieces. The seat can be made out of a reclaimed pallet. Check out the porch swing plans featured on therusticpig to find out all the details and to figure out how you can personalize this project. Pick a nice paint color that complements your porch decor. View in gallery We love the simplicity of the porch swing shared on instructables. If you want to build something like this, you first have to gather all the supplies. After that, the next step is to sand the boards and after that to trace the template which you can do with the help of the porch swing plans in the tutorial. Make the holes in the armrests, round over the edges and then start assembling your new swing. Other than that, the steps you need to follow in order to complete this project are pretty much the basic ones.

I kind of equate it to singing in the shower, except with my clothes on. You can listen to it HERE. This is what our porch looked like right after we moved into our house and before I gave it its latest refresh. It was blah and boring and definitely not a relaxing oasis! Grab your glass of sweet tea and come join me in my relaxing porch oasis. A resource list of many of the products I used is listed at the bottom. I intended to replace the two chairs with a couch, because hello "nap. Just look at all that pulley and rope goodness! The purchase of the swing, along with the painting of the exterior of our house , prompted a whole refresh to the porch, which got me to thinking about the tricks that I use anytime relaxation is the main focus for a space at my home. OK, back to the whole purpose of this post " creating a relaxing oasis on your own porch, deck or patio. These poufs are a couple of years old and had become pretty sad and saggy. I opened a seam up on one of the bottom side seams of each pouf and stuffed them full of pillow stuffing until they were nice and taut, then hand-sewed the seam closed. Adding a generous amount of cushions, pillows and throws makes it all as comfy as possible. I try to walk the fine line of having enough stuff to make a space feel cozy to me, without having too much. I filled our porch with all of the basics and then added in the fluff. An inexpensive trellis panel, like THIS one, was taken apart, painted with black spray paint and hung using cup hooks to give the illusion of a more defined space. I repurposed a galvanized metal chick feeder found at a pop-up show as a planter. Add ambiance with candles. By keeping a consistent flow of colors, your eyes will relax as they travel around the room. My porch consists mainly of varying blues, grays and neutrals. If you have noise that you find bothersome, consider adding a small fountain with the sound of gurgling water, the white noise of a fan or some soothing music. We lived close to a busy city street, near a fire station think frequent sirens , at our last house. Shrubbery or a row of trees can help to break up and absorb some of the sound too. Oh, yeah " want to see the original before and the before this refresh of our screen porch? See my disclosure HERE.

First I should tell you that for years I had a nice little screened porch, but I suffered badly from Porch Envy. All I had managed to do was to find these cool candle lanterns at Target, which I hung from plant hangers, and put an outdoor lamp from Home Depot on a little antique table. I just had a square porch with a table in the middle in it. Then this spring it occurred to me: The first thing I wanted ate up a hunk of the money: I really wanted an area rug for my sitting area. So I went to the cheapest source of goods available: I shopped the house. This bookshelf was languishing in our bonus room holding a motley collection of board games. I moved the board games and had my big strong sons move the shelf down to the porch. This bench was hiding out in my back yard, pretty much unused. So I hauled it up to the porch. Now for the fluff: I love it holding this birdhouse. I grew the hydrangeas with my very own hands. I shopped the house for most of the stuff that I used to dress the shelves. I walked around looking for things that just seemed to say "porch" to me. For instance, the lamp on top of the bookshelf I stole from a little table in my guest room. The topiaries were in my dining room years ago. The black tray is one I made with postcards and Mod Podge. I did buy a few things: Now a couple of questions for you. I think I want to paint the bookshelf and the bench. Have any suggestions for me? Thank you for hosting us, Kimba!
