Some have entertained more than others but they have all been good reads. It has some of her best characters involved in a story that is about love, hate, joy and despair. It is amazingly readable and "new word here" unputdownable. Her story concerns two couples who have condos at the beach that are close to each other. Adam and Eliza have twin sons while Carl and Eve have a single daughter. When they show up at the beach at the same time both couples are living idyllic lives. They are both successful in their businesses and their relationships. But there is a serpent in this Garden of Eden atmosphere and that is the fact Adam and Eve were high school sweethearts and now seem unable to separate the past from the present. As the years pass the lives of the two couples become more and more complicated, and the friendship between them hits highs and lows. The question arises as to whether the friendship and even the marriages can survive. This is where the basic writing skills of Frank come into play. Eliza is the bright star of the story. She is such a warm-hearted, loving, skilled woman you hope someone like her could enter your life. She has the capacity to be the best wife, the best mother and the best friend you could ever know. There are also strong supporting characters in this book and they are as clearly defined as the main ones. Frank leaves no stone unturned and no scene less than full. The book feels complete in every way. It is just right. Summer books have to toe a sharp line. They have to include romance as well as a bit of humor. Dramatic moments are allowed if they are not too much of a downer. They have to be an easy read but some complications in plot are allowed. I have been a Dottie Frank fan for many years, and I look forward each May or June for her latest offering. This new novel was worth the wait. I devoured it as soon as it arrived. As I said, it is unputdownable. Jackie K Cooper - www.contributors control their own work and posted freely to our site. If you need to flag this entry as abusive, send us an email.

Chapter 2 : Same Time, Next Year (film) - Wikipedia

Same Time, Next Year is the fourth and final full-length novel in Debbie Macomber's Those Manning Men series. As with pretty much all the books in the series, it's a sweet, light romance. As with pretty much all the books in the series, it's a sweet, light romance.

All states allows all white men to vote North Carolina is the last state to remove property ownership as a requirement to vote. Citizenship is defined and granted to former slaves. Voters, however, are explicitly defined as male. Although the amendment forbids states from denying any rights of citizenship, voting regulation is still left in the hands of the states. White men Some African American men All Women Vote cannot be denied because of race, explicitly - so other discriminatory tactics used 15th Amendment passed. It states that the right to vote cannot be denied by the federal or state governments based on race. However, soon after, some states begin to enact measures such as voting taxes and literacy tests that restrict the actual ability of African Americans to register to vote. Violence and other intimidation tactics are also used. Anthony is arrested and brought to trial in Rochester, New York, for attempting to vote in the presidential election. At the same time, Sojourner Truth, a former slave and advocate for justice and equality, appears at a polling booth in Grand Rapids, Michigan, demanding a ballot. She is turned away. It grants citizenship to Native Americans who give up their tribal affiliations. White men White women Some African Americans Right to vote extended to women 19th Amendment passed, giving women the right to vote in both state and federal elections. In the next year, the court finds that "Asian Indians" are also not eligible to naturalise. White men White women Some African Americans Native Americans Again, citizenship granted but voting denied The Indian Citizenship Act grants citizenship to Native Americans, but many states nonetheless make laws and policies that prohibit Native Americans from voting. However, state officials refuse to allow African Americans to register by using voting taxes, literacy tests and violent intimidation. Among the efforts launched is Freedom Summer, in which nearly a thousand civil rights workers of all races and backgrounds converge on the South to support voting rights. It guarantees that the right to vote in federal elections will not be denied because of failure to pay any tax. It forbids states from imposing discriminatory restrictions on who can vote, and provides mechanisms for the federal government to enforce its provisions. The next day, nearly 4, African Americans register to vote. Other civil rights leaders such as Martin Luther King, Jr. Meredith re-joins the march at its conclusion in Mississippi. White men White women African Americans Native Americans Asians Citizens over the age of 18 Voting age lowered to 18 26th Amendment passed, granting voting rights to year-olds. The amendment is largely a result of Vietnam War protests demanding a lowering of the voting age on the premise that people who are old enough to fight are old enough to vote. Intends to increase the number of eligible citizens who register to vote by making registration available at the Department of Motor Vehicles, and public assistance and disabilities agencies. The National Commission on Federal Election Reform recommends that all states allow felons to regain their right to vote after completing their criminal sentences. Nearly four million US citizens cannot vote because of past felony convictions. In most states, felons are prohibited from voting while they are in prison or on parole. In some states, especially in the South, a person with a felony conviction is forever prohibited from voting in that state. These laws are a legacy of post-Civil War attempts to prevent African Americans from voting. Ex-felons are largely poor and disproportionately of colour. Massive voting reform effort requires states to comply with a federal mandate for provisional ballots, disability access, centralised, computerised voting lists, electronic voting and the requirement that first-time voters present identification before voting. White men White women African Americans Native Americans Asians Citizens over the age of 18 Overseas troops and expats Residents of US colonies The Military and Overseas Empowerment Act The act established more efficient means for troops stationed overseas and expatriates to request and receive absentee ballots through the mail or electronically. Civil rights activists say the law is still needed to ensure fair political representation and access to voting.

They have a sexual tryst, then agree to meet once a year to rekindle the sparks they experienced at their first meeting, despite the fact that both are happily married with six children between them. They discuss their spouses, Harry and Helen. Over the course of the next 26 years, they develop an emotional intimacy deeper than what one would expect to find between two people meeting for a clandestine relationship just once a year. At their meeting in , George tells Doris that his wife, Helen, died of cancer earlier in the year, and that Helen revealed to a friend that she had known of the affair for ten years, but never told George she knew. Now a widower, George proposes to Doris who refuses to accept because of her loyalty to, and respect for, Harry. Rejected, George leaves for good -- but he returns, and they promise to continue the affair as long as they are able. Production[edit] The movie is structured as six episodes, each occurring approximately five years apart. Between the scenes are shown a series of photos that depict cultural and political events that had ensued in the years between each segment, such as Harry S. The episodes are period-specific, often making references to what was actually happening during the time portrayed. The shell of the cottage was built on a temporary foundation overlooking the Pacific Ocean , but the interior was filmed on the Universal Studios sound stage in Los Angeles. After filming was completed, Universal paid for the shell to be relocated to a permanent foundation and the interior was outfitted with the studio furnishings. The cottage became a popular romantic getaway, so popular in fact that the Heritage House eventually partitioned the cottage in half and added a second bathroom to the opposite end. One half of the cottage was called "Same Time" and the other half called "Next Year". The Heritage House closed due to foreclosure in December Paul McCartney had composed a title song for the film, which he recorded with Wings , that was not used. He later released it as the B-side of a single in As directed by Robert Mulligan. Same Time, Next Year is both less and more than it could have been. But he substitutes the serenity of a California coastal setting, and gives the film a visual glamour that is mercifully distracting. Mulligan seems to have been more interested in sprucing up the material than in preserving its absolute integrity, and under the circumstances, his approach makes sense. Miss Burstyn, on the other hand. And it features two first class performances by Ellen Burstyn and Alan Alda.
