

Chapter 1 : U.S. Metros Ranked on Black-White Income Inequality – Next City

May 02, – The Fine Print In The 'State Of Black America' Report: For this reason, the overall Equality Index of Black America was percent, compared to percent the year before. An index.

Jessica Captain, right, of East Orange, N. And each year it finds a new way to describe the deteriorating status of Black and now Latinos as well people as compared to Whites in economic terms in this country. Underemployment is defined as those who are jobless or working part-time jobs but desiring full-time work. It also comes as no surprise, the report also said Blacks are twice as likely as Whites to be unemployed. The unemployment rate for Blacks was 12 percent in February, compared with 5. Even as the economy continued to crawl out of the Great Recession of this March, unemployment stayed steady at 6. According to the new March jobs report , new jobs were added as the number of private-sector employees rose past their January levels, when the recession began. Total employment is still , jobs short of its January peak, largely because governments at all levels are employing fewer workers, and they added no jobs in March. Unemployment has also remained at a steady 6. The ratio of employed people in the total working-age population increased to . The number of long-term unemployed also fell by ., and the number of people discouraged in their job searches also fell, to its lowest number since March . David Bositis, a statistician and political scientist, told The Final Call. Overall, 71 percent of Blacks surveyed in the General Social Survey agreed that they have a good chance of improving their standard of living, outpacing the share among Whites by 25 percentage points. Kellogg Foundation, which released similar findings in separate research. However, the economic portion of the index dropped from . Where do we go from here? The Urban League is pushing for several economic measures, including an increase in the minimum wage, an issue being debated in Congress as well as in several state legislatures. Republicans generally oppose the proposal, saying it would cost too many jobs. Blacks and Republicans rarely see eye to eye, according to Dr. There are going to be big cutbacks in the not too distant future in the military. The Midwest and the Plains are much bigger areas in terms of agriculture and if you look at the price of land, the price of land there is way, way more than the price of land in most of the South. People are killing off their herds of cattle. There are places where there is absolutely no water available. There may be another major reason why it is so hard for Black people to come together for their own benefit, according to Dr. The wealthy elites and politically powerful have forgotten about Black America and the poor in the United States. We must be able to extract raw materials from the earth and manufacture them into something useful for ourselves! This would create jobs in production. We must remember that without land there is no production. King gave, where he said: We are going to have to do this for ourselves. Even with an African American president, it is obvious that the cavalry is not coming. King said, we are going to have to do this for ourselves. And I tell people:

Chapter 2 : The state of Black America in a word: 'Crisis' | MSNBC

THE 42ND EDITION OF THE NATIONAL URBAN LEAGUE'S STATE OF BLACK AMERICA REPORT IS LIVE. Critically lauded, it has become one of the most highly-anticipated benchmarks and sources for thought leadership around racial equality in America.

By Trymaine Lee Last year was a year of great tumult in America. Income, education and equality gaps have remained steady. The voting rights of many Americans were eroded or greatly limited. And the killings of unarmed black men by police and later the lack of indictments in those killings sparked massive unrest, illuminating the trust gap between many communities of color and law enforcement. Even as marked a year of momentous job growth, many have not seen their job and income prospects buoyed by the upsurge. It is a tale of two Americas. And the reality is we have this obligation. This duty, this essential role to report the facts and the truth and how it is today even if those fact and that truth are extremely painful. The facts as stated in the report are mostly dismal and stark, particularly in terms of economic parity for blacks and Hispanics and whites. Despite 12 straight months of private sector job gains above , and a national unemployment rate of just 5. The numbers are even more disheartening in terms of the wealth gap. The equality index included economics black Even college educated African-Americans faced drastically higher unemployment rates compared to their white counterparts with the same level of educational attainment, according to the report. Yet, even with the deep and lingering disparities was indeed a banner year in some educational aspects. But in the aggregate of the broader indexing of education, employment and justice, the outlook for black and brown people remains troubling as ever. There are more black lawmakers in Congress than ever before, And the Justice Department under Attorney General Eric Holder has confronted misconduct by law enforcement and worked hard to improve police and community relations, Morial said. Yet, was a watershed moment in the collision of violence and law enforcement. Louis was rife with income inequality and deep residential segregation. It is a tale of some who have achieved a great modicum of success, economic success, upward mobility, home ownership, a strong quality of life.
