Other Sacred Actions In Worship. Although the Eucharist, or Lord's Supper, has always been the most distinctive sacred or sacramental act of Christian worship, the historic church has found certain other events of worship to be especially symbolic of spiritual realities.

Resource Library Theology of Worship and Spirituality This course guided by this syllabus would explore the notion that worship and spirituality correspond with Christian truth. The Scripture and common creeds of the early church are studied to reveal the overarching Christian narrative of creation, incarnation and re-creation. Worship and spirituality are understood within this context, the meta-narrative of faith, commonly known as the Christian world view. In the second part, students will interact with one another over their common readings. The foundation of the course is the Bible. The student will study the Scriptures in order to develop a biblical theology of worship and spirituality. This study will be enriched by classroom discussion and the reading of required texts. The student is asked to interact with the biblical foundation of worship and spirituality so that his or her heart and mind are infused by a continuous openness and personal vulnerability to the biblical sources. It is understood that the study of biblical worship and spirituality is not only academic, but for personal enrichment, spiritual growth and the development of ministry skills in the life of the local church. Class time will be filled by lectures, discussion, and presentations. Please anticipate no more than one excused absence. The entries for each book must be completed by the beginning of the class session during which the book is discussed. It is recommended that the student research a narrow topic in depth, supplemented by contemporary application. The paper should not exceed 20 pages in length. Footnotes and bibliography must follow the style of Turabian, 6th ed. A paper of about 10 pages interacting with the reading must be submitted for evaluation. It is recommended for the student to choose readings representing their own tradition. The extent of work, original thought, and interpretive analysis must be equal to the assignments outlined above. Approval for the project is to be determined through discussion with the instructor. The Church as a Worshiping Community. Biblical Guidelines for Emerging Liturgies.
