"I, Tonya" is not really dark comedy. "I, Tonya" is just dark with laughs in its irony and the stupidity of those closest to Tonya. The movie is the dichotomy that defines the tragedy of domestic violence and abuse.

The story is not to be reprinted or reproduced without permission of the author or published for profit. There were too many details to keep straight as First Officer. He was constantly checking on the each of the bridge station officers and there were always the shift schedules to keep straight, reviews to be completed, staff meetings to attend to, daily activity rosters to check and a myriad other details that fell to the First Officer of a major star ship. Today was not usual though. It actually had started during the second watch on the previous day. Stray, random thoughts would intrude in the middle of his routine. At first the distraction was a rather pleasant, if an ill-timed intrusion. At 52 it had been several years since he had been forced to concentrate on his duties during a watch, actively resisting a stray fantasy or two. There he was again. He glanced at Councilor Troi as discretely as possible to judge what her reaction to his latest lapse would be. To his surprise, Deanna was starring off into nowhere in particular herself. Very good at picking up on them. Usually she delighted in letting him know just how much she disapproved of such thoughts too. He tried to remember the last time he waited for his shift to end. Yesterday he started stealing glances at the computer chronometer 1 standard hour before his shift was over. An hour later Riker was still checking his chronometer. Time was dragging on and he was finding it harder and harder to concentrate. The thing that bothered him most though was that these fantasies were not his usual fare. Instead they seemed to begin with a romantic walk, or a soft kiss. Riker forced himself to return to writing the final edits of the phase inducer emergency power down drill scheduled in two days. Glancing up, he checked the time. With relief he realized the shift was over. Riker passed the watch and gratefully entered the turbolift. The constant distractions could be a sign. Maybe his subconscious was telling him that he had put his personal life on hold for far too long. As if in response to his thoughts, his communicator sounded. I was wondering if you would care to join me for dinner this evening? Judy Celeste was a civilian scientist that had started a six month project on board the Enterprise just a few weeks ago. She was an avid mountain climber and did seem to have a good deal in common with him. Almost to his surprise, Riker found himself replying, "Thank you for the invitation, but I have other plans tonight. Riker wondered who he was kidding. Then he remembered his fantasy. Why the hell not, he wondered? With that he headed back to his quarters. Finally he decided to try just one last time. He was about to request Dr. He was in no mood to deal with Judy Celeste. Celeste was not present. Instead, Deanna stood in his doorway. She ran her hand through her disheveled hair and impatiently asked, "Well, are you going to ask me in or do you want me to leave? Deanna, are you okay? Not the soft, gentle brush she upon occasion had used with him, but an insistent probe that demanded entry into his thoughts. Then abruptly she pulled away despite the fact that he opened his mind to her. He tried to understand, but he had no idea what she was referring to. Then dissolving into tears, Deanna tried to break loose from his embrace and escape back to her room. He held her too tightly though. He was not sure, but he had an idea he knew what was troubling the counselor. On the off chance that he was correct, he gave the traditional promise in the old Betazoid dialect, whispered softly in her ear. Her tears fell quietly as she answered in the traditional response, confirming his suspicions. It was a rather romantic way to get engaged, he decided, but as Deanna drew him close and began to kiss him, Riker realized the celebration was going to be even more romantic. He lay next to her watching her sleep peacefully, exhausted after their non-stop love-making that had made up a little for the thirty some years since the last time they had spent the night together. Will wondered what would happen now that Deanna had indeed entered the first stages of the phase. His promise issued the previous evening was an indication of his acceptance of her desire to have him for her mate. He kissed her on the mouth and watched her wake up. How dare you take advantage of me like this! He could feel her desire increasing again as she stared at his nude body. Gently he pulled her towards him. Tell me, have you no memory of last night? I am drawn to you as a moth to the flame at this time. He gently placed his hand under her chin and pulled her face up forcing her to look at him. I should never have put you in this position. An hour later, Riker hit his com badge. Data I am going to need to report an hour later than normal. I will be with Dr. Crusher if you need me. Laughing Riker took her hand. Outside the office Riker sat waiting, wondering what people would think when they learned what was happening to Deanna and what had happened between the two of them. Crusher watched the two of them for a moment. Maybe if you sedate me. A humanoid could survive but only for a limited time without protection. Data turned to face the Commander. Normally he would have picked Deanna Troi, but today that was out of the question. Doctor Crusher glanced quickly over at Troi as she fell asleep on the bio bed. Turning to the nurse, Crusher warned, "I hate sedating her. It is not a solution, but unavoidable for the moment. On the transporter pad, Beverly eyed Riker who was waiting for her. Everyone gagged at the first inhale of the strange atmosphere. Nearby was the transport shuttle, broken into three pieces scattered over the ground. Strange clouds of fog were scattered around the barren landscape which was punctuated by bubbling mud holes, small geysers and open beds of lava which periodically spit out molten rock in tiny fireworks. Everyone heard a moan and Smith, one of the security men, ran toward a body that was stirring. As the fog enveloped Smith he cried out in agony and fell to the ground, writhing in pain. Bending down he started to examine the dead transport shuttle pilot when he noticed some strange looking powder on the ground. Reaching over he touched the powder. One of the largest fog patches moved directly to Riker and covered him, leaving him screaming in convulsions. Overhead, Deanna Troi woke up from her sedated sleep. Dutifully a nurse ran to her with the injection. Doctor Crusher gave me strict orders. On the surface Crusher started to go to the aid of Commander Riker when a patch of fog blocked her path. Fearful of the strange smoke, Crusher tried to go around it, but was blocked again. Go ahead and release her. It appears we may be dealing with an intelligent life form. Troi may be the only one capable of confirming that. Immediately she sensed his pain as every nerve seemed to be raw. It was a howl like the wind, but the words it formed made the hair on the back of her neck stand up. Leaning forward intently he quizzed, "And the Counselor? We have uploaded the transports logs and it appears they experienced a power failure in their essential maneuvering array. We suspect they were forced to crash land on the surface. Do you see anything that would confirm this theory? Debris is scattered all over the surface here.

The I, Tonya true story reveals that, surprisingly, this actually happened. Allison Janney right recreates the moment for the movie. Did Tonya Harding really get lower scores than she deserved because of her tough image? Like in the movie, judges at times gave her lower scores because her gruff personality contradicted the conventional "presentation" they were looking for. Her skating was powerful and athletic instead of graceful and balletic. The unfair treatment by the judges made Tonya an even more rebellious skater. The Price of Gold documentary, "and she did not fit the image at all, not even close. When and where did the attack on Nancy Kerrigan take place? The attack happened on January 6, at Cobo Arena in Detroit Michigan, where Kerrigan had just finished a practice session for the U. Stant first planned to attack Nancy Kerrigan at her training rink in Massachusetts but was unable to find Kerrigan. So he followed her to Detroit and attacked her shortly after she stepped off the ice after practicing at Cobo Arena for the national championships. The moments before and after the attack were caught on tape and can be seen in this Nancy Kerrigan attack video. Like in the I, Tonya movie, she is on the ground crying out, "Why?! He struck Kerrigan on her right leg very close to the top outer side of her knee. Fortunately for Kerrigan, her leg was not broken but she did suffer a bone bruise. The injury kept her from competing in the national championships the next day, which Tonya Harding won, guaranteeing her a spot on the Olympic team Sports Illustrated. In , the United States Figure Skating Association USFSA concluded that Harding knew that the attack on Kerrigan was going to happen, stating that Harding exhibited "a clear disregard for fairness, good sportsmanship and ethical behavior. She claims that her ex-husband confessed privately to her after the attack. There are cool misfits, and then there is Tonya. And I love that" W Magazine. No, but it did help Tonya to win nationals and guarantee herself a spot on the Olympic team. Harding at one point had to stop midway into her routine to plead with the judges to allow her to fix her skate lace. After experiencing lace issues, an emotional Tonya Harding top stops shortly into her routine at the Winter Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway and explains her issue to the judges. Margot Robbie bottom recreates the moment in the I, Tonya movie. Was Tonya Harding really banned from U. In her autobiography, The Tonya Tapes, she claimed that she wanted to tell the FBI what she knew but her ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly, threatened to kill her following a gunpoint gang rape with two other men, an assertion Gillooly calls "utterly ridiculous. While investigating the true story, we discovered that Margot Robbie did portions of her own skating, but the more complicated parts were done by experts. Instead, the filmmakers used computer generation to pull off or not pull off the triple axel. I did probably four months of training, five days a week, a couple hours a day. It was at times kind of difficult. However, Robbie says that she never wanted the character to be a carbon copy of Tonya. Margot Robbie met up with Tonya again when they showed her the movie right before it premiered at the Toronto International Film Festival. Tonya also attended the world premiere. Does Nancy Kerrigan plan to see the I, Tonya movie? During an Access Hollywood interview for her appearance on Dancing with the Stars, Nancy Kerrigan was asked if she plans to see the I, Tonya movie.

It is interesting that besides the Latin Mass also Glagolitic Liturgy had been served regularly in the Church of St Jerome, with the use of Glagolitic missals and breviaries. The congregation exists even today, under the name of Croatian Papal Collegium of St. The name was given by a rescript of Pope Paul VI in Also very important in educating our students was a Croatian Collegium in Bologna , founded first as Collegium Hungarica - Illyricum, then soon Croatized, as Hungarians had their own Collegium Hungaricum in Rome since Collegium Illyricum in Loreto was founded in , intended to educate Croatian youth, with students. It was acting with interruptions until During three centuries about 1, Croatian students were educated there. The most outstanding of them was Bartol Kasic , author of the first Croatian grammar Rome, The earliest known description of a sporting event in Croatia is from the 16th century. It referred to the regatta of seventy four yes, 74 wooden fishing boats called falkusa , from the harbour of the town of Komiza on the island of Vis to the islet of Palagruza. It was the oldest known boat race in Europe. Falkusa is autochthonous Croatian boat of 9m of length, with the mast of equal size, in use from 11th or 12th century until the middle of the 20th century. A crew was composed of five rowers, and the marathon covered 42 miles, for which about five to fifteen hours of continuous and exhausting rowing was necessary, depending on weather conditions. Falkusa, autochthonous Croatian boat from the town of Komiza, island of Vis The very start of the marathon of the armada was announced by a cannon from the Renaissance tower in the Komiza harbour early in the morning of 20th May. One can imagine the foam raised by 74 boats and rows in the harbour! The description of this interesting event is kept in the Liber Comissiae in the parish of the town of Vis on the island of Vis. Postage stamp designed by Danijel Popovic, Zagreb. The next earliest known description of a sporting event in Croatia is from the 18th century It referred to the regatta of two fishing boats representing the cities of Split and Makarska, from an islet near Milna on the island of Brac to the Split harbour. It was the Makaran boat that triumphed! The Croats at that time had the status of Kingdom within the Empire. According to Adam S. Eterovich about 20 percent of S. The name of Ragusa has many variations: Also the name of St Vlaho, patron of Ragusa Dubrovnik: An important discovery of Adam S. Eterovich regarding the Croats in the New World covers several obviously Ragusan names of mariners in the famous Columbus crew in Martin de Aragus, Pedro de Arague. For more details see [ Eterovic ], p. According to Adam Eterovich, the fact that Verrazano has no genealogy in Italy or France seems to suggest to seek his roots in Dalmatia, not in Italy: The nobility of Europe always maintained very detailed and accurate genealogies for rights of title, succession and property. Tudor in his Tudor Geography , London states: This was noted by the French Ambassador Marillac in As for the Dalmatia of the New World, it is possible that even the name of the Potomac river in Washington is of the Croatian origin: There are very strong and convincing indications that even Marco Polo was a descendant of the Croats Marko Pilich. Many of the early European expeditions to the western shore of the Atlantic finished with shipwrecks. So was the case with some ships from Dubrovnik in the 16th century. It is interesting to mention that the Croatan Indians in the USA could possibly be the descendants of the saved Croatian crew, as authenticated by their name, brown hair, blue eyes and some of the words in their language. An American writer John Lawson in his chronicle wrote that among Croatan Indians of that time there was a legend of a 16th century shipwreck with mariners who saved themselves and stayed with Indians. Figure Skating Association, voted to strip Harding of her title. However, the competition results were not changed and the title was left vacant rather than moving all the other competitors up one position. The assailant was Shane Stant, contracted to break her right leg. Using both hands, he then swung a inch ASP telescopic baton at her right leg, striking her above the knee. The intent was preventing her competing in both the National Championships Kerrigan was the defending U. He was sentenced in July after publicly apologizing to Kerrigan "even though, he said, "any apology coming from me rings hollow. Eckardt was released from prison in September and changed his name to Brian Sean Griffith; he died at age 40 on December 12, Schatz asked if she had considered whether someone she knew had planned to attack Nancy. Harding answered "I have definitely thought about it. No one controls my life but me I wish him nothing but the best. The Seattle Times reported the transcript stating that Harding had "changed her story well into a long interview I know now [Jeff] is involved. Harding said she had done nothing wrong. She said she was sorry Nancy Kerrigan was attacked, that she respected Nancy, and claimed not to know in advance of the plot to disable her. Harding then publicly took responsibility "for failing to report things [about the planned assault] when I returned home from Nationals [on January 10] When asked about Gillooly, Harding said "I never did anything to hurt [Jeff]. If I ever did anything, it was to stick up for him and protect him. Chung admitted she would not have travelled to Norway were it not for the scandal. Approximately members of the press were there to document this practice. On February 5, , the disciplinary panel of the U. She and her lawyer, Robert Weaver, negotiated a plea bargain ensuring no further prosecution. Her plea admissions were knowing of the assault plot after the fact, settling on a cover story with Gillooly and Eckardt on January 10, witnessing payphone calls to Smith affirming the story on January 10 and 11, and lying to FBI with the story on January Figure Skating Assn resignation, necessitating her withdrawal from the World Championships for which she was scheduled to leave tomorrow. Regarding trial concerns, he stated "we would have prevailed at trial. Neither issue was decided at that time. It also read that Harding, Gillooly, Eckardt, Smith, and Stant agreed to "knowingly cause physical injury This is based on civil standards , not criminal standards Robert Weaver said the decision disappointed her but was not a surprise, and that she had not decided on an appeal. The USFSA has no dominion over professional skating events, yet Harding was also persona non grata on the pro circuit, few skaters and promoters would work with her. She did not benefit from the ensuing boom in professional skating after the scandal. He reported that Harding still held to her statement from her press-conference given on January 27, After reading through the interrogation of that day, she concluded that "[Tonya] knew more than she admits. Brown then mediated a joint interview with both Kerrigan and Harding present. The two former competitors shared sincere desires for happy families and general well-wishes toward one other. Nancy Kerrigan said she hoped Harding could learn from past mistakes and "find happiness. Prouse from recorded interviews , she stated that she wanted to call the FBI in to reveal what she knew, but decided not to when Gillooly allegedly threatened her with death following a gunpoint gang rape by him and two other men she did not know. Jeff Gillooly Stone responded with surprise that groundless claims against him could be published and specifically contended her gang rape accusation to be "utterly ridiculous. Yet he expressed regret that Harding is often "remembered for what I talked her into doing," meaning allegedly plotting to injure Nancy Kerrigan. The film was released in
