The Good Old Days Are Now Vincent Nguyen â€” March 16, â€” 10 Comments "I wish there was a way to know you're in the good old days before you've actually left them." -Andy Bernard, The Office.

Teenagers can be defined as a young person aged between 13 and 19 years old. A teenager is a transitional stage of physical and mental human development that occurs between childhood and adulthood. This transition involves biological example pubertal, social, and psychological changes, though the biological or physiological ones are the easiest to measure objectively. Because of that, there are many good and bad things about the teenagers that we can relate. As teenagers, the best thing that we can do is that we can enjoy and have full time of happiness. All we have to think is about ourselves and our studies. Nowadays, we can see many teenagers grow in the world of entertainment and sports. They enjoy doing with their career and this can prevent them to do something bad. Beside that, the good thing as a teenager nowadays, we are rich with the technology. Now, everywhere we go is a technology. They just have to use the technology to improve their selves to make more successful than before. Like Minister Education of Malaysia, they add computer subject in the syllabus. They make it as a compulsory subject to learn. So that, they can calve a success generation. The good things also come to the bad things. Nowadays, teenagers lack of moral values and self-discipline. In the past, majority of the youths then learnt respect, courtesy, honesty and righteousness from a young age, and had enough self-discipline to hold to these values. However, these moral values and self-discipline are slowly diminishing over the years, as most of the younger generations are gradually disregarding these ethics. The listed values have slowly faded away, as they mean little to these adolescents, as moral values and self-discipline are on the verge of disappearing. Even the simplest of morals like, respect, care and consideration are slowly fading away over the years. Furthermore, teenagers nowadays are really freedom. Because of the freedom they like to do what they want. They like to try new things to their selves. Three million people under the age of 20 in the United States become infected with a sexually transmitted disease each year. With 66 percent of high school students having had intercourse by graduation, these numbers are not surprising Planned Parenthood-Helping Young. The effects of sexually transmitted diseases can be devastating. Once a person contracts herpes, he must deal with it for the rest of his life. The HIV virus puts a person on the fast track to death. Growing up is hard enough for a child without having to face his own mortality. For the conclusion, there are many good and bad things to be teenagers nowadays. All is in our hand to make us be good teenagers or bad teenagers. That shows the responsibility of teenagers to the country is very huge. Therefore, we have to show to the other people with good manners as administer of the country.

Nick March 17, at 3: My mind filters out a lot of the bad stuff from the past. Or maybe a built-in brain filter that chucks the pain. Funny but I do remember the real good times. Like when I had that first crush. If I try to make it real, thinking about it like it is right now, many of the same feelings come back. The heart starts beating faster. I feel the rosy glow in my face and skin. The tingling sensation in the stomach and lower down returns. The mind is incredible. Here is to you and your readers memories of the good old days. Vincent Nguyen March 18, at 8: Funny enough, when I was in the Philippines, the shower was where everything would hit me. I was so liberated for the first time in my life. And I was right. Here I am 7, miles away from that shower, that home, replaying those scenes in my head and reaffirming the thoughts I had in the shower. Rob Leonardo March 17, at 4: Time flew fast and I have and a lot of looking back at those good old days. And indeed, if we think of the present as a good old day “someday” how I would love to cherish every bit of it. Like I was telling Nick, the shower was where I spent a lot of my moments of intentional gratitude. Pick a daily routine that can act as your trigger to be grateful. The shower is where I sing karaoke as my music plays loudly from my Jambox speaker. Yousuf March 17, at 8:

The Good Old Days. M likes. A new site to share memories of how we grew up in the 50's and 60's.

Maybe you were looking for In the old days Ahh, the good old days. Ahh, they were good old days. Once you reach a certain age, you will recall the good old days, whether you lived during the time period or not in recent years, an overwhelming increase in the latter. The good old days refer to a time in the past that was good , as opposed to current times, which are not so good , or at some times bad. It is widely believed that now will never be as good as then , and the future will be even worse than now, therefore, it will be worse than then. Not like in the good old days. The only finite historical period that was ever good was the aforementioned November 11th, November 7th, This holds true whether the people living during that time were having a good time or not, or whether the person who considers them the good old days was actually alive during that time. This theory maintains that the previous generation or generations enjoyed a more pleasant and urbane existence than the current generation. This theory is generally held by angry old white men , embittered post-menopausal women, and post-local music scene twenty-somethings. This theory is also coupled with the everything historic is bad theory. The two dates that comprised the theory exemplify absolutely no historical significance to anyone. The argument behind the theory is that because those two days have no historical significance, there was nothing wrong with either. History tends to be about bad things, and bad things end up being history in all cases. This theory however leads to the logical paradox that because it has become a theory, the two days in question have become a part of history, and are now bad as well. What made those days better than these days? The good old days can be mathematically proven to be better than the current days using a formula that has since been lost somewhere in the jungles of Cambodia. Due to the uninhabitable nature of Cambodia, no one has tried to retrieve it, and thus the true explanation of why the good old days are better than today is unknown. The good old days consisted of four key things that have either completely disappeared or are close to extinction. Spanish Flu "The Spanish Flu kicked off the good old days. Even still, Spanish Flu killed more than ,, people around the world , which, when adjusted for inflation , is more than ,, people by modern standards. There were no recessions , or market slumps in the good old days. Those are for days when the free market has been bound and gagged in the janitorial closet of congress the bad current days. The good old days were when the market was free to do whatever it pleased, and there were no regulations strangling it. The Great Depression was truly the symbol of the good old days. Those were the good old days. Whether it be cigarettes, cigars , or that strange plant growing on the roof of the next door apartment complex , smoking lengthened our lifespan long enough to see a day when it is socially unacceptable to smoke in a restaurant. They truly were the good old days. Racism ran rampant across the country and it seemed no race was safe unless you were white. It was perfectly acceptable to be prejudiced against black people , Chinese people, and these things called Irish people since then Irish people have become extinct. Back when the KKK had a say in politics everything seemed to work out in the end. Spending hours chasing that negro down the street for looking at a young white female the wrong way was the way to get exercise back in the good old days. Nazis knew how to march in perfect unison! That was the one fault of the American Army. Nowadays we have the pansy terrorists. But sadly the United States has dropped its standards for enemies, for in the good old days they expected nothing but absolute genocide. On November 8th, John F. Kennedy , through the aid of his mafia muscle, was able to clinch the Presidential election against pre-crook Richard Nixon. Kennedy announced in his acceptance address that " A generation of hippies , Rock and Roll , and experimental drug use!

Most of the shows on television were about cowboys. The good guys wore white hats and the bad guys wore black hats and it was easy to tell them apart. The good guys never did bad things, and the bad guys never did good things. The television shows that were not about cowboys were about happy, loving families, such as Leave it to Beaver and Ozzie and Harriet, or they were about superheroes, such as Superman, who was always on the side of right and his personal faults never tripped him up. But those days were not really so good, you only remember them that way. What you forget as you reminisce about the fifties is the terror of that decade. We began with the hysteria of the red scare and ended it terrified of the bomb. On the weekend, we went to the local school to see the latest fallout shelters, which if we had enough money, we could bury in our backyards so that we could survive the nuclear holocaust. We stared up into the nighttime sky in fear and awe at Sputnik, the first artificial satellite ever to orbit the earth, and in our terror we flocked to the theaters to watch movies about oppressive invaders from outer space. Later we discovered that the actors who portrayed our domestic ideals on the television tube did not live them in their daily lives. Many of the he-men whose manliness we admired at the movies turned out to have been gay all along. Nothing turned out to be what it seemed at the time! Not only were our pleasures illusions, our terrors were as well, and as for the Communist Bloc we feared so muchâ€”it evaporated like a bad dream at the dawn of a new day. We began that decade with the assassination of the president of the United States and ended it with the Viet Nam war and filled the middle with racial strife. The seventies contained the inglorious end to the Viet Nam war, the resignation of a president, and war veterans who were denied the glory we promised them. I could go on and on, but my point is clear: And so Ecclesiastes tells us not to ask why the old days were better than these, because such a question arises, not from wisdom, but from amnesia. Would you like to go back to the fifties in a time machine? Back then, hearing aids were the size of paperback books, there were no computers, television was only black and white, and there was no air conditioning in private homes. There was no Heimlich maneuver, no CPR, no open-heart surgery, and no effective treatment for epilepsy, depressive disorders, or migraine headaches. There were no headrests, seat belts, or airbags in cars, and most of the good highways had not yet been built. So why do we forget the trials, tribulations, and troubles of former times and remember them fondly? Why do we yearn to return to a time in which we lived in terror day and night? We remember them as the good old days, because we know how they turned out. We have anxiety about the present age, because we do not know how things will turn out, and in being anxious, we reveal our lack of faith. Jesus says, â€”John There is no fear in love, for perfect love drives out fear, because fear has to do with punishment. The one who fears is not made perfect in love. We fear, because we do not believe that Jesus has truly overcome the world, and we fear because we do not love Him or trust Him as we ought. But if we truly believe that Jesus could die upon a cross and raise Himself up from the dead on the third day; if we truly believe that on the fortieth day He ascended into heaven and sits, alive and well, at the right hand of God, who is His Father, then why do we fear the present age? When we ride a roller coaster, we scream in terror in the middle, but beneath that terror we trust the management, that no true harm will come to us. If we can trust the management of a rickety roller-coaster ride, why can we not trust the Management of the Universe? When will we stop hiring false teachers to encourage our fears and to magnify our anxieties? We know from past experience that our fears are baseless and our anxieties are pointless. We know from past experience that the false teachers who encourage us to be fearful and anxious are working for their own profit and will end their own careers in scandal. Why then do we follow them and not trust Jesus? If Jesus rising from the dead is not enough of a sign for us, what will it take to shake us from our anxieties? What will it take to get us to stop luxuriating in our fear? For if Jesus can raise Himself from the dead, and if He promises to do the same at the end of the age for anyone who trusts Him, and if you truly trust Him, then there is no terror you cannot face. For even if you are defeated and cast down and betrayed and backstabbed and slanderedâ€”and even if you die and everyone forgets youâ€™ Jesus will give you triumph over all the terrors of this life. And looking back on these days, as you look back on the days of old, you will see that your terrors had no substance, your anxieties had no cause, and your trust was not misplaced.
