

Chapter 1 : "Bewitched" The Magic Cabin (TV Episode) - IMDb

"The Magic of Bewitched Trivia and More" should never have been published. Incomplete, inaccurate and minor trivia at best. Herbie J. Pilato set the standard of excellence with "Bewitched Forever" and Rita E. Piro's "Elizabeth Montgomery - A Bewitched Life" met that same standard and is the ideal complement to Mr. Pilato's book.

August 2, at 6: Cynthia was born November , as filming for this episode completed December 10th Cynthia did not receive an on-screen credit, and nothing is known of any further roles. The policy of the show was to have Tabitha "grow" a bit faster than a baby would in real life. Therefore it was necessary to hire slightly older babies every few weeks. Because a law existed that a child under the age of 6 could only work 2 hours per day. Producers thereafter chose twins to perform the role. As required by California law, a nurse was present at all times. Even with these precautions, though, the director was limited in his use of the babies to thirty seconds at a time. They were born on August 16th and were four months old when they filmed their episodes. Heidi and Laura never received an on-screen credit for their appearances as Tabitha. But her husband Robert was sure that twins were on the way, and he was right. The casting director was interested enough to invite them to the studio. Rosemarie was a little nervous at first, but all her fears blew away when she saw how the babies took to the other actors, the cameras and the lights. As young as they were, they immediately developed a crush on Dick York, who was the real life father of five children. Their eyes followed him wherever he went. And they seemed to catch the love of everyone within reach of their tiny fists. Rosemarie said that their casting had caused a real flurry of excitement in her family. Her husband Robert was amused, but their oldest daughter Karen, was absolutely thrilled. It would save a lot of work! Although in Rosemarie said she wanted Heidi and Laura to continue acting as long as it did not interfere with their schooling, nothing is known of any further roles. The next twins to take the role of Tabitha were identical twins, Julie N. They were born June 24th and were slightly older than the Gentry twins and when they started filming were 6 months old. Julie and Tamar appeared in a total of 12 episodes and were 10 months old when they finished in the role. They never received an on-screen credit for their appearances as Tabitha. They had heard so much about child actors losing their most precious years of childhood that they were repelled at the idea of their children becoming actors. But a friend of theirs convinced them that twin babies are in great demand in both the movies and television, and they ought to take advantage of this situation. Arlene and Stephen talked it over and decided to register the babies with Central Casting. Besides, it need only be a temporary job that would soon peter out. When they were asked to come to the Bewitched set, Arlene said the girls saw and conquered Elizabeth Montgomery, Bill Asher, the cast, and even the technical crew. They also gurgled, clapped pink little hands and rolled their eyes. Imps are what we hired and imps are what we got. Most mothers say their babies are little angels. She admitted hers were little imps. At first, the Young twins posed a problem. They did not eat at the same time. One cried for her bottle at 4, the other at 4: Nor were they on the same sleeping regimen, one preferring to take her nap an hour before her sister. Bill Asher said with satisfaction that in the end, they discovered that this was really a blessing. It was perfect for the shooting schedule. It meant that one of the babies was always available for the cameras. Julie and Tamar Young did not continue with acting. Born June 17th , fraternal twins myself, Erin Margaret and my sister, Diane Kathleen Murphy were cast for the role of Tabitha before the start of the third season. It was one of the most eagerly awaited TV moments in television history. In fact, a Tabitha Spelt Tabatha vinyl doll and paper doll set were two of the few licensed Bewitched items made in A whole new set of problems arose in Morning Glory Circle. When at home later Tabitha demands a toy elephant, Aunt Clara accommodates, but waves up a live polka-dotted one instead. Tabitha can now not only make her toys fly around, she can now conjure up people into her presence. Then in "Samantha fights city hall" Nov 28th Tabitha after being double dared by a boy, with a full handed twinkle of her nose, she slides UP the slide at the park. Amy sobs that she wants to be a butterfly, so Tabitha grants her wish and Amy the butterfly flies out of the window. Fortunately after much mayhem, Samantha returns Amy so Tabitha can return her to normal. Darrin gets upset when Tabitha magically recreates her toys in clay in "Samantha the sculptress" Feb 6th This delighted children watching the show, and sparked creativity, imagination, and a new joy in books in much the same way that the Harry Potter book series has done recently. Tabitha twitches her and Lisa to be polka-dotted so they look more alike. This is the first episode where Tabitha abandoned the finger-assisted nose twitch for her own unique crossed finger wiggle. This new method then continued through the final season. Using her witchcraft, Tabitha pops into the studio to lecture Punch. This show featured Marionettes by the legendary Bob Baker. Since the Stephens could not hire a regular babysitter for their "gifted" children, viewers got to meet some interesting caregivers during the series for Tabitha and Adam. Along the way Tabitha had no problem distinguishing Serena from Samantha. Although Bewitched has never been revived on TV since the series ended, the idea of resurrecting Tabitha was attempted on four different occasions. Adam was voiced by Michael Morgan. This pilot was broadcast on ABC on April 24, The pilot was picked up by ABC and aired on May 7, and the series debuted on September 10, and aired for one season twelve episodes. In this series, Tabitha Stephens was a TV producer. Unfortunately, I was only 13 when the series aired. The producers of the show wanted the character to be 22 instead. Another cartoon was being developed during the early s. We met several times at his office. Sadly, the animated series was never completed. Then it did not appear in the top again until In , the year Bewitched debuted there were only 22 new babies named Tabitha in the US for that year. During the original run of Bewitched, the name of Tabitha continued in popularity. By the final season in th, with new babies being named Tabitha. Once again remembering that prior to Bewitched, the name of Tabitha was not in the top new baby names. The two daughters of actor Edward Andrews were named Tabitha and Abigail. Although Elizabeth only met them once, she remembered their names, and thought that Tabitha was such an old fashioned name, and loved it. Tabitha appeared in a total of episodes. November 3, youtube Sony Pictures TV recently green-lighted a pilot for a revamped version of the supernatural classic sitcom Bewitched. For those who truly loved the original series, here are 14 fun facts about the show and the actors that might surprise you. The Ashers thought the show had possibilities, and Liz signed on to be Samantha. While Grimes was still scheduled to play the lead, a young actor named Richard Sargent was close to being signed on to play Darrin Stephens. His role in They Came To Cordura changed his life forever. During the second-to-last day of filming Cordura, York was operating a railroad handcar carrying wounded men. There was no type of surgery that would repair his injuries at that time; instead, the best the specialists could do was supply him with a steady supply of increasingly strong pain medications. York managed to work through his severe pain for the first four seasons. In the middle of Season Five, however, he was run-down and it showed on camera. The replacement doctor instead gave him B, and while filming a scene with Maurice Evans on a scaffold 15 feet in the air, the hot lights, exhaustion and medications combined to send York into a seizure. He was rushed to the hospital and never returned to the Bewitched set. Some Darrin-less episodes were filmed until Dick Sargent took over the role. Montgomery wore progressively looser clothing to disguise her expanding waistline. Her subsequent two pregnancies were written into the Bewitched script, adding Tabitha and Adam to the Stephens family. The two Andrews girls are named Tabitha and Abigail. Honestly, I shudder every time I see it. Her undershot jaw prevented her from landing any leading lady roles when she took up acting, but she could be counted on as a good comic foil. Four months prior to receiving a phone call from her agent telling her that William Asher wanted her for a role on his new TV show, Pearce was diagnosed with ovarian cancer. She told none of her coworkers of her condition, and other than her being a little tired on the set now and then, no one suspected her of being ill. Pearce passed away in March, and was awarded a posthumous Outstanding Supporting Actress Emmy Award two months later. Sandra Gould took over the role of Gladys Kravitz for the remainder of the series. Agnes Moorehead was often pictured wearing a starburst brooch that was set with 8. Montgomery admired the pin, and when Moorehead passed away in, she bequeathed it to her TV daughter. You can see Moorehead wearing the brooch on an episode of Password above. Even though Endora barely tolerated Darrin on the show, off-camera Moorehead was closer to York than any other cast member. She also admired his acting talent and was not at all pleased when he was replaced with Dick Sargent. Lorne turned bumbling into an art form with her portrayal of loveable Aunt Clara. Tragically, Jonathan was a passenger on Pan Am Flight which exploded over Lockerbie, Scotland, on December 21, , killing all souls on board. David died two years later of a heart attack, and is inurned with his son in a niche at the Hollywood Forever Cemetery. The plot involved unabashed racist Mr. Brockway, owner of a toy company whose million-dollar advertising account McMann and Tate was eager to land. Her spell went haywire and Tabitha ended up with black polka dots on her face and pal Lisa with white spots. In the end, Samantha explained that all men and women are brothers and sisters despite the color of their skin, and then for good measure zapped everyone at their Christmas party into blackface when Mr. Bernard Fox, who played Dr. They were never actually sung over the opening credits, but the Bewitched theme song does have lyrics.
