

Chapter 1 : The Mystery of the Baghdad Chest - Delaware Division of Libraries - OverDrive

The Mystery of the Baghdad Chest. The morning after a party, a man's body is found stabbed and hidden in a chest. From The Regatta Mystery and Other Stories and While the Light Lasts.

The Mystery of the Bagdad Chest concerns how a dead body found its way into the titular chest in the midst of a dance party. How Does Your Garden Grow? The problem is solved non-violently by fellow vacationer Parker Pyne. In Yellow Iris, Poirot follows an anonymous phone call to a restaurant table laden with the favourite flower of a woman who died mysteriously four years before. This story was expanded and made into the full-length mystery Sparkling Cyanide , featuring Colonel Race instead of Poirot. Miss Marple Tells a Story is written in the first person by the elderly sleuth , who recalls solving without leaving her own chair a seemingly impossible murder. In The Dream, an eccentric millionaire tells Poirot of a troubling dream in which he kills himself " and is found dead a week later. Its title alludes to the phrase " Through a glass darkly ", used by the Apostle Paul to describe how we currently view the world. In Problem at Sea, a rich woman is found dead in her cabin on a luxury ship off the shore of Alexandria. The story concludes with Poirot saying: Nor has she opportunity for continued suspense. How Does Your Garden Grow?: Problem at Pollensa Bay: In a Glass Darkly: The story was later rewritten by Christie to change the detective from Poirot to Parker Pyne for book publication and all collections in both the US and UK contain the Pyne version of the story. The original Poirot version appeared in the 3 May edition of the Hartford Courant newspaper with an uncredited illustration. It surfaced again in as part of the three-volume Harper collection, Agatha Christie: The story appears as the postscript to the Poirot volume. No print publications of the story prior to are known. For first publications in the UK, see the applicable UK collections below.
