

Chapter 1 : Usher - Next Contestant Lyrics | MetroLyrics

"Next Contestant" I judge by what she's wearing Just how many heads I'm tearing Off of assholes coming on to her Each night seems like it's getting worse.

Ran Hakubi Team Possible! Yeah, its a KPPIR cross over. Members of Global Justice, their family, and their friends were going to make up the audience for the show. And since the contestants come from the audience, well, lets just say that nobody would be cheating their way on stage. CBS had pulled out all the stops for this one airing. Bob Barker was going to be the special host, coming out of retirement just for this. Yes, it would indeed be a heck of a show. Why, it was even rumored that Team Possible, having both turned 21 a week earlier, would be in the audience. The producers watered at the mouth thinking about how much of a ratings boost that would give them. Rod took his spot in the announcers booth, at the very back of the audience. From there he would read descriptions of the products being used in the games and the prizes to be both won and placed up for bids. He settled into his seat and started to go over the list of items that were to appear on the show that airing. Five minutes before Rod actually took his spot, he was told to make sure that Team Possible got on "Contestants Row. He looked over the list of audience members and started to check off the first four he would call down to the stage, and then the six after that. Rod was now ready to start the show. And so, the Global Justice agents piled in, one by one. Some of them had worn their jump suits, while others had gone with a more dress like uniform. However, two members of Global Justice had worn their mission clothes. Purple T-shirt and black pants. Black turtle neck and dark grey cargos. Back stage, Bob Barker sat in his make up chair, going over the list of games that would be played that taping and the order that they would be played. He also had a list of the prizes to be given away, but not as detailed as Rods. It was good to be doing it again, but with his age, he was also glad he had given the reigns of the show to Drew Carey. He was doing a great job as the new host. Rod looked out over the audience. Every seat was full. It was time to start. Rod grabbed the bottle of water in front of him and took a drink. The water was important in keeping his vocal cords lubed and loose. With a quick clear of his throat, it was time to start the show. With each name called, the camera would zip about wildly, trying to find the contestant. He quickly pulled them back up and made a break for the stage. Once the show of good faith was over, he took his mark and the classic thin microphone from the Barker Beauty who had brought it up to him. He turned and looked right at the camera, "Hello, and welcome to a special Global Justice episode of the Price is Right! They were thrilled that CBS had actually asked them if they wanted a special episode of the show they were now in front of. They were even more thrilled when Dr. Made from environmentally friendly Director, Kim, and Ron all marveled at how beautiful the china was. Will, still in pompous jerk wad mode, just stood there, mentally trying to figure out the price of the item. While Rod was talking and Bob was off camera, he took the price card from the back of the display. In fact, everybody had to do that. However, the dinging of a bell brought him out of his thoughts. Bob blushed a bit and then pointed to where the game was being pulled out. Kim let out a very high pitched shriek as a car was pulled onto the stage. Now, the first number in the price of the car is a two," Bob said led her to the two, "Now, do you believe the next number is the five in front of you, the eight behind you, or the three to the right of you? A ding went off and the number five appeared on the price board. Once again, the ding went off and the six appeared on the price board. Now, is it the four, the nine, or the two? She was right again. Is it the five, the one, or the zero? The ding went off, letting her know that she had just won the car. Bob expected nothing less from the world famous Kim Possible. Kim jumped up and down and gave Bob another kiss on the cheek before heading off to the back stage area, where she could wait for the Showcase Showdown and watch the rest of the show. Kim was thrilled that she had just won a new car. In fact, for the past few weeks, she had been back to the old "Hitch a ride" method of transportation. Bob, still on stage, turned and looked directly at the camera and started to talk at it, "One game, one winner! Will be back, right after this. This story will be exactly 9 chapters long. Six for the contestants, two for the showcase showdowns, 1 for the showcase. See you guys next chapter. Your review has been posted.
