June 17, at 9: In a nutshell, what does this freshman sire class look like? I mean, it is a tremendously talented group of freshman sires that will be offered this year. It is a catalog very heavy in freshman sires, which it always is. When you put together the catalog, what is the mindset on including a lot of young sires. Why so many of these yearlings, and why did these sires ended up in the catalog? For over 30 years, there has been a close association and affiliation with the July Sale at Fasig-Tipton, and new sires, or freshman sires. For many, many years we had a special showcase called The New Sire Showcase, which featured the yearlings by the first- and second-crop sires. So the market certainly is always excited to see the future stars. And we sure crave physical horses in the July sale. Are you expecting those horses to be the kind of types that are good, early developing, 2-year-old new prospects? Those also happen to be very good candidates for two-year-old-in-training sales. Clearly, we are trying to find mature, precocious individuals. We might be willing to forgive a little bit on the pedigree in certain instances as long as the physical is there. The July Sale is exciting because it kicks off the yearling-sale season. How do you think the market is playing at the moment? The catalog this year is larger. We find the quality is at least as strong if not stronger this year, both in terms of physicals and pedigrees. The two-year-old sales this year have established that the market is similar. I think everyone is energized and excited to see another spectacular horse like Justify appear on the scene. Can I be the one that picks out the next Justify, or the next American Pharoah, or the next great horse? From an economic standpoint, that drives the dream from the upper end of the marketplace, to think that you have a horse that can accomplish those types of things, and the value that those horses create is dramatic.
