About 'Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star' (Kids Song and Nursery Rhyme) Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star is a popular English nursery rhyme by 19th-century English poet Jane Taylor. Her poem, "The Star," was first published in "Rhymes for the Nursery ()."

Sing the song together while clapping the rhythm at the same time. Take a fairly slow tempo. Explain that this song has 4 beats in a bar and count 4 beats in before you start each time. Play the tune to the child while they sing along. If the child can read, suggest they point to the words on the music as they sing. Explain that the right hand plays the tune. Talk the child through the fingering of each note, line by line as detailed below. Gently touching the fingers in the order that they must be played can be a help. One Phrase At A Time Encourage the child to attempt one line of the song at a time and gradually build it up, phrase by phrase. Sing along as you play – this helps prevent them from getting lost, as well as anticipating what comes next. With a bit of practise the child will soon memorise the tune and want to play it over and over. This may be the first time that they have had a new position for the left hand, so spend a little time getting used to the C below middle C. Explain that the left hand is in the same place as the right hand but one octave lower. Follow the fingering as detailed on the sheet music above and build it up gradually, working out each phrase at a time. Sing along with the tune as you play the left hand accompaniment. This is always satisfying as you can hear how the left hand harmony notes fit together with the melody line. Playing it as a duet one hand each might be enough for some children. They should only be encouraged to play both hands together if they are keen to do so. Playing the piece with both hands together can be attempted once each separate hand can be played with ease. This should be approached in the same systematic way, gradually adding each phrase line by line.

This Twinkle Twinkle Little Star easy piano music with its simple, repetitive melody and small five finger range is perfect for little beginner hands. As Twinkle Twinkle Little Star is usually one of the first songs a small child will sing, it makes a great choice as one of the first easy piano pieces.

Sing the song and pay attention to the pitch of the notes. We know the first two notes are the same, and they make up the first twinkle. The notes change however for the second twinkle. They go up in pitch a little. So we know that the next twinkle in the first verse is made up of two A notes. What about the three notes that make up "little star"? We figured it out using our ear and our piano! The melody comes down in steps. That is a good hint that the song is not in the key of C. Listen closely and see which note sounds off. Try playing the same phrase with an F instead of an F. We also notice that our ear is sort of pushed to the D when the melody is playing, so there is a good chance that our song is in the key of D major. Finished off the rest of the song by listening to the pitch as we sing and picking out the notes on the piano gives us D D A A F F D as the notes for "like a diamond in the sky". We know that the root is D. So start the song with a D major triad. When the melody gets to the B, we need to change the chord, but which one do we use? We want a chord in the G major scale that has a B in it. The E minor chord has a B. So do the B minor chord, and the G. The G chord, however, fits nicely. Starting the second verse is a G. When we get to the E, we have a number of choices. E minor contains an E note. But so does A, and A is the fifth chord of the scale. Five chords really like to lead back to the root, which is what we want. Now repeat the song from the beginning. The key to this exercise is to use your ears to hear which chord is best in which spot. We are using simple triads now, but there are many other chords which add notes on top and can give more nuance to your playing. For the next song, you can practice London Bridges Falling Down.
