Wright family birth records to and marriage records to Campbell County, Virginia / Robert N. Grant.

It indexes selected information found in a variety of collections and sources at the Library of Virginia. The card index files were originally organized by county. The number of entries listed under each county varies greatly, with the following counties having the largest indexes: There are also indexes for the following counties: Because these indexes were compiled by different people using different sources, the dates covered and the amount of information vary with each county. In addition, this index does not exhaust all available sources for the counties, nor is it a comprehensive index to Virginia marriages. Some obvious errors have been corrected in the transition from card index file to database, but researchers should use caution in accepting the information in the index as accurate without consulting the original source material. Original sources were not referenced in the creation of the database from the card files. Search Tips Searching by county displays a listing for all entries from that particular county. Search by Bride or Groom Name: Name searches may be performed by using a first or last name only or a combination of the two. Searches may be performed by using a single letter in the first name field and a full or partial name in the last name field. This search displays a list of all the marriages from this database indicated to have taken place between free people of color. Record-keeping practices prior to emancipation frequently included the use of the notation "Free Negro" to indicate a record or event concerning a free person of color, whose legal rights and responsibilities differed from those of enslaved people. Due to the difficulty of tracing African Americans prior to , most of whom were enslaved, indexers felt compelled to include this information in their indexes. The keyword search looks across all name fields and the notes field. Search results can be quite numerous, particularly if common words are used as search terms for example: Mary, John, or County. This search seeks only words that are directly next to each other, so use as few search terms as possible for best results for example: Mary Smith, spinster, of New Kent County. The dates listed in the marriage card files are not necessarily marriage dates. The date given could refer to the date of a marriage bond, to the date that an announcement of the marriage was published in a newspaper, or to some other date. Researchers must consult the source listed for an entry to determine what the date indicates. Notes Field in Database: Clarifying information is also present in the notes field, for example, to explain a particular date or spelling of a name. This information varies widely, with some entries providing no additional information. The notes field is searchable only by using the keyword search function. The source from which a particular entry in the index was taken is noted in full in the source field. Entries for which no source could be determined are noted as such in the source field. Please consult the original source indicated in these instances. All sources included are: Auditor of Public Accounts, Entry Reports of fees and taxes collected, The originals are not available. Marriages of Henrico County, Virginia, Virginia Marriage Bonds, Richmond City, Staunton, VA, ; reprinted Many of these are available at the Library of Virginia.
